ABSTRACT

Salwa Nabila. 1702050062. Contrastive Analysis of Subordinate Clause as Adjective in English Novel and Indonesian Novel. Skripsi. English Education Program of the Faculty of Teacher Training and Education, Universitas Muhammadiyah Sumatera Utara. Medan. 2021.

This research dealt with contrastive analysis that is Adjective Clause in Complex Sentence in English Novel and Indonesian Novel that is Harry Potter and the Goblet of the Fire and its Indonesian Version. The objective were to find out the similarities and differences between English and Bahasa Indonesia subordinate clause as adjective in English novel and Indonesian novel. The researcher focused on the complex sentence (68 sentences) which have adjective marks (that, who, which, who, whom, whose) and analyzed the kinds of the complex sentence and the sentence structure to find the contrast of the two languages. The theory used was Quirk and Greenbaum about basic sentence structure in English and Noortyani about basic sentence structure in Bahasa Indonesia. According to Quirk and Greenbaum there were seven kinds of basic sentence structures: Subject-Verb-Adverb, Subject-Verb-Complement, Subject-Verb-Object, Subject-Verb-Object-Adverb, Subject-Verb-Object-Complement, Subject-Verb-Object-Object, Subject-Verb. But according to Noortyani (2017) there was only one basic sentence structure Subjek-Predikat-Objek-Keterangan in Bahasa Indonesia. Contrastive analysis was used to analyzed the data from the novel Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire, both English and Indonesian version which was published in 2005. The data showed that from 37 chapters, the research was found that only 44 clauses had subordinate adjective clauses. 27 of them were similar in English and in Bahasa Indonesia, and the rest 17 of them were different in English and Bahasa Indonesia. It was found that English and Bahasa Indonesia had similar basic sentence structure but there were some conditions that make them contrast.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful, Praises and Gratitude be to Allah for giving the strength and guidance to the researcher so this skripsi can be finished accordingly. Peace and blessing be upon the Prophet Muhammad SAW.

The research was entitled “Contrastive Analysis of Subordinate Clause as Adjective in English Novel and Indonesian Novel”. It was written to fulfill one of the requirements to obtain the Sarjana Pendidikan Degree at the Department of English Education, Faculty of Teacher Training and Education, University of Muhammadiyah Sumatera Utara.

This research is actually a miracle since it was firstly given as a task that would be very hard to do. However, it has now been written and finally it is finished. The researcher would like to thank Allah SWT for His blessing that the research can be finished without any meaningful problem. Then, the researcher would like to thank her beloved parents, Irwan and Suryani and her little brother El Syafiq Amsyar Nabil for their love, support, and prayers.

Additionally, the researcher is grateful to the following for their support and help:

1. Prof. Dr. Agussani. M.AP., the Rector of University of Muhammadiyah Sumatera Utara.
2. Prof. Dr. H. Elfrianto, M.Pd., the Dean of FKIP UMSU for the help to do this research.

3. Mandra Saragih, S.Pd., M.Hum., and Pirman Ginting, S.Pd., M.Hum., the Head and Secretary of English Education Department of FKIP UMSU for their help and support to do this research.
4. Halimah Tussa'diah, S.S., M.A., her supervisor who has given a lot of suggestions, ideas, critics, and guidance in writing this research.
5. Lazuardi Ramadhani, S.T., who has given researcher so much motivation in doing this research.
6. All of her friends in 8B Morning.
7. The songs of Pamungkas, Nadin Amizah, Raisa, Fiersa Besari, Hindia, Isyana Sarasvati, Afgan, David Archuleta, Tulus, TheOvertones, and GAC which have accompany her in doing this research.

The researcher hopes for suggestions and critics from all readers to the benefit of this research. May Allah SWT bless all. Aamiin.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background of the Study

Every language has its own different characteristics, such as the audio system or the grammatical pattern. Chomsky (2014) states that grammar of a language intend to be an illustration of basic ability of a good communications. One part of languages is sentence. According to Davidson (2002), sentence is a group of words that cause a statement, a question, and a command. Sentence is created by words, then words form into phrase, phrase form into clause. According to Sauter (2000) there are four types of sentences; simple sentence, complex sentence, compound sentence, and compound – complex sentence. Simple sentence is a sentence that consist only a predicate and an object. Compound sentence is constructed by two or more than two main clauses linked by coordinate conjunctions. Complex sentence is a sentence that has a main clause and one or more than one subordinate clauses linked by subordinators (which, who, although, where, when, etc.). Compound-complex sentence is two main clauses that connected by coordinate conjunction “and”.

For example:

1. The girl (Subject) is singing (Predicate) a sad song. (Simple sentence)
2. She likes banana (First main clause) but (Coordinate conjunction) he likes apple (Second main clause). (Compound sentence)

3. They want to go to the zoo (Main clause) which^{Subordinator} located in another city (First subordinate clause) if^{Subordinator} the pandemic has got better. (Second main clause). (Complex sentence)
4. They don't mind to play at that snowy garden (First main clause) and (Coordinate conjunction) they sure they will not catch a cold. (Second main clause)

In sentence structure, sentence may be linked by words such and, or, but, etc but still in the form of a sentence and smaller. Smaller sentences that link together as a larger sentence called clause. Clause can be divided into two; main clause and subordinate clause. Main clause is a clause that can stand alone as a sentence, and subordinate clause is a clause that need a main clause to stand. According to Wren and Martin (2000) there are three types of clauses: noun clause, adverb clause, and adjective clause. According to Davidson (2002) noun clause is a clause that have a function as noun or pronoun in a sentence and adverb clause is a clause that has an adverb in it. In Haryanti and Setyandari (2018) states that adjective clause is a subordinate clause that has function as adjective, which means to explain noun. In english, adjective clause usually signed with who, whom, which, whose and that.

For example:

1. I don't know her house. (Noun clause)
2. They leave the house when the fire spread wider. (Adverb clause)
3. He reach his glasses which laid on the table. (Adjective clause)

According to Noortyani (2017) kalimat disimpulkan sebagai hubungan antara dua kata atau lebih dan kelompok kata yang lain seperti frasa dan klausa. So, sentence in Bahasa Indonesia can be divided into smaller parts such as clauses, phrases, and words. According to Moeliono (2017) berdasarkan jumlah klausanya, kalimat dalam Bahasa Indonesia digolongkan kepada 4 jenis, yaitu kalimat simpleks, kalimat kompleks, kalimat majemuk dan kalimat majemuk-kompleks. Alwi (1993) in Supriyadi (2014) menyatakan bahwa kalimat simpleks hanya terdiri dari satu klausa utama yang memiliki subjek dan predikat. Moeliono et al. (2017) mengemukakan bahwa kalimat kompleks terdiri dari dua klausa yang satunya tidak bisa berdiri sendiri sebagai kalimat. It could be said that complex sentence constructed with two clauses and one of those clauses is a part of another clause, and it is called subordinate clause. Subordinate clause can not stand alone as a sentence. It is linked to another clause called main clause. After kalimat kompleks, there is kalimat majemuk which contained with two or more clauses and have an equal relation which usually signed with conjunction and, or, but. And after that, there is kalimat majemuk kompleks. This kind of sentence is a kalimat majemuk with a complex part or vice versa.

For example:

1. Gadis (Subject) itu sedang memasak (Predicate) di rumah ibunya.
(Kalimat simpleks)
2. Hari ini akan jadi hari yang cerah (First main clause) karena mungkin tidak akan hujan (Second main clause). (Kalimat kompleks)

3. Dia tidak tahu arah pulang (First main clause) tetapi (Conjunction) dia tetap memaksa pergi (Second main clause). (Kalimat majemuk)
4. Dia tidak tahu arah pulang tetapi dia tetap memaksa pergi (Kalimat majemuk) karena dia tidak punya pilihan lain (Complex part after kalimat majemuk). (Kalimat majemuk-kompleks)

In Bahasa Indonesia, according to Noortyani (2017) kalimat adalah satuan bahasa terkecil dalam wujud lisan atau tulisan yang mengungkapkan satu pikiran yang utuh. According to that, sentence in Bahasa Indonesia is phrase in a group of words which created new meaning, and clause is a group of phrases but wider than a phrase and a part of a sentence which is smaller than a sentence. Haryanti & Setyandari (2018) divided clauses into three, they are: 1). Noun clause, which defined as a noun in a phrase form, 2). Adverb clause, which defined as adverb in a form of a clause, and 3). Adjective clause, which function to modify a noun, and 3).

In this research, the researcher was focused on complex sentence with adjective clause in it. Azar (1993: 267) in Lahu (2014) explain that adjective clause is a clause which modify a noun or pronoun. This clause is draw, identify, or even giving further information about a noun or pronoun which connect to main clause and subordinate clause. Adjective clause in Bahasa Indonesia usually signed with word yang.

For example:

1. Rumah tidak berpenghuni dan seram miliknya (Main clause) yang katanya paling berhantu di kota ini. (Subordinate clause)

2. Yang mereka masih kurang paham (Subordinate clause), membersihkan rumah besar memerlukan tenaga yang banyak. (Main clause)

The sentence above is a complex sentence with an adjective clause. The clause “Rumah tidak berpenghuni dan seram miliknya” is the main clause of the sentence and the clause “yang katanya paling berhantu di kota ini” is the subordinate clause of the sentence. It can be seen that the subordinate clause giving more information about the main clause. Shortly it can be concluded that the sentence referred to “rumah” and “yang paling berhantu”.

Mastering sentence structure may be difficult to understand by people who want to master English. Because there are so many differences between English as foreign language and Bahasa Indonesia as the national language. For example, it can be seen that in the example of complex sentence in English, main clause always followed by subordinate clause, or subordinate clause placed after its main clause. But in Bahasa Indonesia, the subordinate clause can be placed before the main clause or the main clause followed the subordinate clause. It also may be difficult to distinguish every kind of sentence and clause especially for students or people who just started to learn English. Supported by this relevance study:

Amelia, Afriyanti, and Riza (2015). Students' Ability on Using Adjective Clause (A Study at Second Year Students of English Department STKIP PGRI Sumatera Barat in 2015/2016 Academic Year). Sumatera Barat: STKIP PGRI.

1. This research was discussed about the students' difficulty in using adjective clause especially in who and whom. This research used qualitative method by using random sampling. The sample was 24 students from second year in English Department in STKIP PGRI Sumatera Barat. The result showed that most of the students had difficulty on differentiate between adjective clause and noun clause. Students could not identify the function of relative pronoun. According to this study, adjective clause is important because most of written text like English magazines, newspaper, textbooks, and others frequently use adjective clause. And also, adjective clause is one part of English grammar that learned by students in English Department STKIP PGRI Sumatera Barat.

Because of that, the researcher chose to study about sentences, especially complex sentence that could help to master English and Indonesian adjective clause in complex sentence to get the differences and similarities about them, contrastive analysis was used. Hornby (1974: 186) in Lulu, Hamim, and Mario (2019) stated that contrastive analysis is used to compare two things to make it clear.

B. The Identification of the Problems

Based on the background study, the problems were identified as follows:

1. English had many kinds of sentences and sometimes confusing to English learners.
2. It was confusing to distinguish every sentence structure in English and in Bahasa Indonesia.

3. People who wanted to learn English often get confused to master English because of the different characteristics in Bahasa Indonesia and English especially in kinds of sentences and kinds of clauses.
4. There were so many differences in English and Bahasa Indonesia subordinate clauses as adjective that need to be understood by people who want to master English. Along with the differences, the similarities between English and Bahasa Indonesia subordinate clauses as adjective are quite plenty and people who wanted to mastering English need to understand it too.

C. Scope and Limitation

The scope of this research was complex sentence in English and Bahasa Indonesia novels but it was limited in adjective clauses in both languages found in English novel "Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire" by J.K. Rowling and its translation version.

D. Formulation of the Problems

The formulation of the problems were discussed as follows:

1. What were the similarities and dissimilarities between English and Indonesian subordinate adjective clause?
2. How was the structure of English and Indonesian adjective clause?

E. Objective of the Study

The objectives of this research as follows:

1. To find out the similarities and differences between English and Bahasa Indonesia subordinate clause as adjective.
2. To find out the structure of English and Bahasa Indonesia subordinate clause as adjective.

F. The Significance of the Study

Theoretically, the results of this research would give contribution to the institution especially for English Education Program.

Practically:

1. To the teachers/lecturers:

To give the information how to understand English and Bahasa Indonesia adjective clause especially about their similarities and differences.

2. To the students:

As the source of information how to study adjective clause as part of clause focused on English and Bahasa Indonesia adjective clause.

3. Readers/other researchers:

As the additional modul to help them to do the same research but in different point of view.

CHAPTER II

LITERATURE REVIEW

A. Theoretical Framework

2.1 Sentence and Types of Sentence

When talking or writing something, students always use groups of words. The relationship of every word accumulated into meaning which makes sense to understand. According to Wren and Martin (2000) sentence are words that linking to make a meaning and rationally understandable.

For example: Horran ate a banana.

Oshima and Hogue (2007) in Analisti (2016) claim that sentences can be assumed as a group of words which in the smallest form and has one subject and one verb aiming to show an idea. Generally, a sentence is a composition of words which are linked to each other (clause) and making a new meaning that can be understood by common sense.

There are so many kinds of sentences provided by many experts. Wren and Martin (1995) confirm that there are four types of sentences; declarative or assertive sentence, interrogative sentence, imperative sentence, and exclamatory sentence. Declarative sentence is a sentence use to state something. Interrogative sentence is a sentence to asking or questioning something. Imperative sentence is a sentence use to give order to other people. And Exclamatory sentence is a sentence that used to show any strong feeling. Verspoor (2000) claim that sentences can be classified into four kinds, they are: simple sentence, compound sentence, complex sentence; and compound-complex sentence.

2.1.1 Simple Sentence

Wren and Martin (2000) illustrates that simple sentence only consists of one predicate and one subject.

For example: He brought a cat

In the sentence above, He is known as subject, brought is known as verb, and a cat is known as object. Combinations of verb and object are called predicate.

Subject	Verb	Object
He	brought	a cat

2.1.2 Compound Sentence

In compound sentence, Wren and Martin (2000) illustrate that it has two main clauses that connected by conjunction. There are some conjunctions that can be used in connecting main clauses, such as: and..., so..., or..., for..., but...

For example: She is not home, so she doesn't know what is happening.

First Main Clause	Conjunction	Second Main Clause
She is not home	so	she doesn't know what is happening

In the sentence above, she is not home is the first main clause and she doesn't know what is happening is the second main clause. The two main clauses connected by so as the conjunction.

2.1.3 Complex Sentence

Next, Wren and Martin (2000) illustrate that complex sentence has one main clause and one or more than one subordinate clauses.

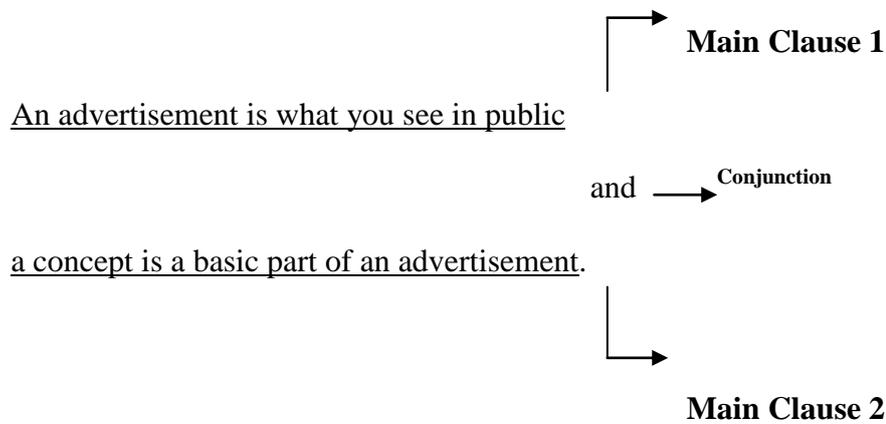

For example: Let's go back to the theatre where we watched the ballet.

In the sentence above, "Let's go back to the theatre" is the main clause because it can stand alone as a sentence and still have complete meaning, and "...where we watched the ballet" is the subordinate clause because it can not stand alone. If the sentence cuts out of the main clause, it does not has ascertain meaning.

2.1.4 Compound-Complex Sentence

Sauter (2000) said that it is possible to have a compound sentence with a complex part or vice versa, it is called Compound-Complex Sentence. Compound-complex sentence can be describe as a sentence which have two main clauses that connected by coordinate conjunction and.

For example: An advertisement is what you see in public and concept is a basic part of an advertisement.

In the sentence above, the first main clause is “An advertisement is what you see in public” and the second main clause is “concept is a basic part of an advertisement”. In the middle of both main clause there is coordinate conjunction “and”.

2.2 Kinds of Subordinate Clause and Its Functions

Based on the explanation above, people have known that a sentence can be at least consist of only main clause, or main clauses and subordinate clauses. Subordinate clause divides into several types. Since this study focuses on subordinate clause, here the researcher provides the kinds of subordinate clauses and its functions:

According to Haryanti and Setyandari (2018) there are 3 types of subordinate clause:

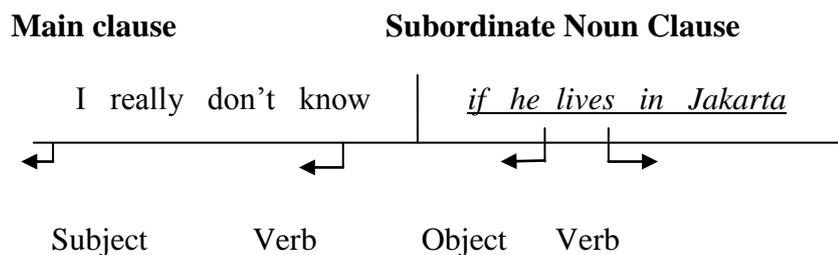

- 1) The Noun Clause, 2) The Adverb Clause, 3) The Adjective Clause.

2.2.1 The Noun Clause

According to Haryanti and Setyandari (2018) noun clauses can be interpreted as nouns formed in clause or clauses that can be use as Subject (S), Object of Verb (OV), Object of Preposition (OP), Subjective Complements (SC) or Appositive (App).

For example:

I really don't know if he lives in Jakarta. (This is an example of noun clause as object of verb)

From the above picture, people know that a sentence should be at least consist of a subject, a verb, and an object (a mix of verb and object are called predicate). So, it can be concluded that:

1. I is the subject of the sentence.
2. Know is the verb of the sentence.
3. He is the object of the sentence.
4. If as both conjunction and noun clause marker.
5. I really don't know is the main clause of the sentence.
6. ...if he lives in Jakarta is subordinate clause of the sentence.
7. He lives in Jakarta = Noun

He lives there = Pronoun refers to Jakarta

...if he lives in Jakarta = Noun Clause

2.2.2 The Adverb Clause

Wren and Martin (2000) define adverbial clause as a subordinate clause which take a role as an adverb. It might change the adjective, adverb, or verb in the main clause. There are some types of Adverb Clause:

a) Adverb clause of time.

This kind of adverb clause usually marked with when, since, while, before, after, until, as soon as, as long as, by the time, now that, once.

For example: I will see you again when the sun rises.

I have never saw him since we were younger.

I wish you go down there before the sun goes down.

b) Adverb clause of place.

This adverb clause usually marked with where/wherever.

For example: He will follow me wherever i go.

We live where the people are open minded.

c) Adverb clause of cause.

This adverb clause usually marked with because, since, as, now that, whereas (legal), inasmuch as (formal), as long as, on account of the fact that, owing to the fact that, because of the fact that, due to the fact that.

For example: He could not do anything since he was ill.

He will not see me because of my fault

d) Adverb clause of condition.

This kind of adverb clause usually signed with if, unless, on condition that, provide that, providing that, in the event that, in the case that, whether...or not.

For example:

She will ask for the divorce, providing that the marriage was not good.

I am not going to Medan unless she asks for me to come.

2.2.3 The Adjective Clause

Wren and Martin (2000) define adjective clause as a dependent clause that has its own subject and predicate and functioned as adjective. Haryanti and Setyandari (2018) stated that adjective clause, or usually known as relative clause is a kind of complex sentence which the functions as adjective – noun or pronoun that modified by a word. Adjective clause usually marked with relative pronouns, such as who, whom, whose, which, that. According to Wren and Martin (2000) a relative pronoun is a pronoun that referred or relate to a noun in a sentence before.

For example: I saw the man whom you met yesterday

Adjective clause can also recognized with where, when, why, after, or before. But it is important to remember that adverb clauses and noun clauses can be marked also with where, when and why.

2.3 Contrastive Analysis

The concept of this research was dealing with the concept of contrastive analysis, so it is important to know what contrastive analysis was.

Johansson (2008) hypothesizes that contrastive analysis is a structural comparison of two or more languages in order to see and elaborate the sameness and differences between those languages. Richards, et al., (2002) in Mena and Saputri (2018), defines that contrastive analysis is contrasting two or more languages in terms of – for example audio system or grammatical pattern. Lado (1962) in Uktolseja, Sujaja, and Matinahoru (2019) stated that contrastive analysis is a contrastive between two languages in structure and to clarify the differences. Guntur Tarigan (1992: 50) in Al-khresheh (2016) writes that on the stage of process, we present two kinds of contrastive analysis hypothesis which are presented in two form, “strong form” and “weak form”. Strong form of the hypothesis shows that the L2 errors can be assumed by understanding the differences between L1 and L2 learned by the learners. Weak form of the hypothesis shows that contrastive analysis has certain characteristics. Because of that, contrastive analysis and error analysis must completing each other. Error analysis spotted the errors which done by the learners meanwhile contrastive analysis referred to the errors lie between the two languages. Contrastive analysis is a study about comparing two language or more intended to see the differences in the language structure and sentence structure. Lee, in Guntur Tarigan (1992: 5) in Al-khresheh (2016) claims there are some basic characteristic of a strong form of contrastive analysis, they are:

- a) The only problem and difficulty to learn foreign language is caused by the disturbance which is coming from the learner's mother tongue.
- b) The L1 and L2 are different and causing distress.
- c) Learning other language could be more difficult when there are so many differences between L1 and L2
- d) The hardship and faults in learning other languages need the prediction of the result from the comparison of both the L1 and L2
- e) Comparison of the two languages that used to establish teaching materials

James (1980: 3) in Mena and Saputri (2018) said that contrastive analysis is a way in linguistic intended to produce reverse (contrastive, not comparatively) two values of typology (contrastive analysis always dealing with two languages) and based on the opinion that comparing language is possible. Contrastive Analysis is often considered the same as contrastive linguistics even though they are different. It is an applied linguistics because of two conditions. First, because contrastive analysis is different from the linguistics itself in terms approaching disciplines of other knowledges, while contrastive analysis uses many aspects of linguistics. From the explanation above, it can be understood that contrastive analysis can be used to analyze two different things.

B. Previous Relevance Study

According to the understanding towards this research, it contained of types of clauses and contrastive analysis. The researcher presented some other researches to support the literature and to find some works which were related to this research. Such as:

1. Uktolseja et al. (2019). A Contrastive Analysis between English and Indonesian Kinds of Sentences. Indonesian Journal of English Teaching. 8(1), 54-61. This journal discussed about the analysis of contrastive in English and Bahasa Indonesia in the term kinds of sentences to find the similarity and differences of both languages. In this study, 20 students of the 2nd semester in Victory University Sorong were used as sample of the study. In this study, the researcher used qualitative descriptive technique to find the contrast between the two languages. The result was found that the students made errors mostly in 4 kinds of sentences, namely: Declarative Sentence, Negative Sentence, Interrogative Sentence, and Exclamatory Sentence. The mistakes were commonly caused by the different pattern of each sentence, since the Imperative Sentence in Indonesian has the same pattern like in English. The similarity of this research as the previous relevance study is because it was contained about contrastive analysis and qualitative descriptive, but the differences is the point of view of the researchers was from the kinds of sentences and the focus was about sentences.

2. Taghinezhad and Taghinezhad (2017). A Comparative Study of English and Persian Adjective. Journal of Applied Linguistics and Language Research. 4(3), 284-290.

This journal discussed about comparing English and Persian adjective. According to this research, adjective in English is easier to identified than Persian adjective. Both of the langauges have some similar characteristics and some different characteristics. By comparing the two languages, the researchers found that English and Persian adjective have the similar syntactic and predicative pronoun. But in superlative adjectives, they are very different. So it can affect learning, teaching, and translation process. This journal can be used as the previous relevance study is because it was contained about comparative analysis which is very close to contrastive analysis as the main method in doing this research and also because the researchers took the point of view about adjective which is correlated with the topic of this research.

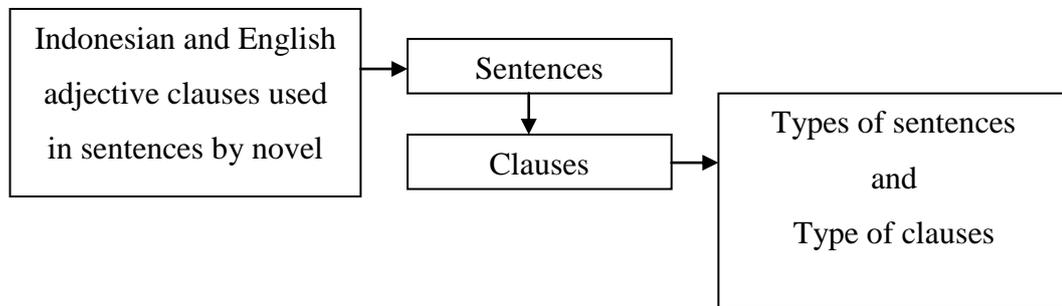

3. Mena and Saputri (2018). A Contrastive Analysis Between English and Indonesian Prefixes and Suffixes in the Descriptive Texts of Students' Textbook. English Community Journal. 2 (1), 175-182.

This journal was intened to clarify the differences of prefix and suffixes in English and Bahasa Indonesia. This research used descriptive qualitative as the research method, documentation technique was used to collect the data, and descriptive analysis was used to analyze the data. After analyzing the data, the researcher found that there are 4 kinds of English prefixes, namely quantified, locative, temporal, and negations. And then 4 kinds of English suffixes namely nominal, verbal, adjectival, and adverbial. And Also 5 kinds of Indonesian prefixes namely verb form, adjectival form, noun form, numeral form, and interrogative form. The data showed that there is only one similarity in English and Indonesian prefixes, that is in the term of quantity. And in the suffixes, there are some similarities in the term of nominal, verbal, and adjectival. This journal related to this study because both of them are discussing about contrastive analysis. But the researchers took the point of view on the differences and similarities between English and Bahasa Indonesia prefixes and suffixes in descriptive text, while this research is focusing on the diversity and equality between English and Bahasa Indonesia adjective clause in novel.

C. Conceptual Framework

Adjective clause is a part of subordinate clause which its role is to explain the noun. It contains explanations with relative pronouns (who, whom, whose, that, and which) or relative adverbs (where or why). This research is trying to discover the discrepancy and equality in the sentences of English and Bahasa Indonesia especially in the adjective clause. In this research, the researcher analyzed the data by using sentences in two novels to identify the similarities and differences of both languages, and giving informations about kinds of sentences and kinds of clauses.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHOD

A. Research Design

Descriptive design was used as this research design and the data were analyzed by using qualitative approach method. The research purpose was to compare the differences and similarities between English and Indonesian adjective clause in two novels by observing through their sentences. According to Creswell (2014), qualitative research concentrates on the writing and information in the written form and the data which found mostly in the form of pictures. So, in doing this research, the researcher was used more data like pictures and text rather than numbers which was belong to quantitative research.

B. Source of the Data

The data was taken by using sentences which had adjective clauses. The researcher took two novels to gain the data, they were Rowling (2000) “Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire” and its Bahasa Indonesia version. Both of them were English and Indonesian novels to find the contrast between English and Indonesian adjective clause. The data was taken from all chapters on each novel. The researcher chose those novels because they both were fictions, and they had the example of adjective clause.

C. The Technique of Collecting the Data

First of all, it was important to know about definition of data. Miles and Huberman (1994) defined data as a form of handwritten or typed field notes. According to Ary, Jacobs, Irvine, and Walker (2018) in qualitative research, the researcher commonly used written documents or other medias to gather the comprehension of the event which going in the research. The documents here could be assumed as written, physical, and visible material, including any other author might call as medias. Document could be personal, such as autobiographies, diaries, letters, whether it is official letters like notes, advisory, and memorandum. It could be a popular items like book, film, and video.

According to the explanation above, the researcher was using the idea of Miles and Huberman that the technique to collect the data was documentation. The data gained through some steps, such as:

- 1) Reading the novels as the source of the data.
- 2) Selecting chapters with many pages.
- 3) Understanding the kinds of sentences found in the chapters.
- 4) Analyzing the differences between English and Indonesian adjective clauses found in the sentences found in the chapters.

D. Technique of Analyzing the Data

Data analysis was the most crucial and difficult part of a research. This part needed so much time to accurately check and interpret on many documents, notes, transcripts, recordings, and all kinds of data from any kinds of documents. Every qualitative analysis was aimed to understand the occasion under study, simplify the information and clarify correlations, making theory about the reason of a correlation happening, and gathering old and new knowledge. Ary et al. (2018) explained 3 steps in analyzing qualitative data, such as:

1. Familiarizing and Organizing

Before organizing the data, it is better for a researcher to be familiar with the data by understanding its form or its structure. After that, organize the data so the data can be gathered easily.

2. Coding and Reducing

Coding means finding the same kind of data with the same structure then put them into group of data. Then the data will divided into a specific group.

3. Interpreting and Representing

Interpreting is building up understanding about some informations into words. It uses to find the general statement of a phenomenon by its structures or common aspects.

Based on the explanations above, the steps to analyze the data of this research were:

1. Reading the novel to gain more understanding about the sentence patterns.
2. Organize the data into sentences that have subordinate clause: complex sentence

3. Finding the same structure of sentences then mark them differently into groups.
4. Reducing the data into sentences that have adjective clause only.
5. Interpreting the data by explaining sentences into words by making the general statement about the data found in the sentences.
6. Then representing the whole data that have been interpreted into tables

CHAPTER IV

DATA AND DATA ANALYSIS

A. Data

In this chapter, the data were collected from sentences in novel Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire both in English and Bahasa Indonesia version. The data were taken start from the first chapter until the final chapter, 37 chapters in total. The data were analyzed by using the theory of basic sentence structure by Quirk and Greenbaum in Sujana, Prabasmoro, and Budhiyono (2015) to find relative pronoun (That, Who, Whom, Which, Whose) as marks of adjective clause. According to the theory, there were seven basic sentence structures: Subject – Verb Adverb, Subject – Verb – Object, Subject – Verb – Complement, Subject – Verb – Object – Complement, Subject – Verb – Object – Adverb, Subject – Verb – Object – Object, and Subject – Verb. According to Wren and Martin, relative pronoun is pronoun that referred or relate to noun in the sentence before. So the theory by Quirk and Greenbaum is suitable to used because it could identified noun as subject or object in sentences. And for Bahasa Indonesia, the theory used was Noortyani (2017). According to the theory, there is only one basic sentence structure: Subjek – Predikat – Objek – Keterangan which similar to basic sentence structure by Quirk and Greenbaum: Subject – Verb – Object – Adverb. The data in this research were determined into complex sentence especially in subordinate adjective clause. The data found were:

B. Data Analysis

The researcher had analyzed structure of complex sentences and had found the subordinate adjective clauses in English and Bahasa Indonesia. So the researcher turned the analysis into similarities and differences in both languages.

4.1 Table of the Similarities in Subordinate Adjective Clause in English and Bahasa Indonesia

The similarities laid in the structure and function of the adjective clause

1. To explain noun

No.	English	Bahasa Indonesia
1.	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv Example : ...who lived in in the Riddle House. Who = Relative pronoun referred to the next family Lived = Verb In the Riddle House = Adverb of place	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + K Example : ...yang tinggal di Rumah Riddle Yang = Relative pronoun referred to keluarga berikutnya Tinggal = Predikat Di Rumah Riddle = Keterangan tempat
	In the sentences above, it could be seen that the similarities were found in the clause structures and the function of every structure in English and Bahasa Indonesia. Both sentences had relative pronoun “which” in

	English that referred to object “the next family” in Clause 1 in English and “yang” in Bahasa Indonesia that referred to the object “keluarga berikutnya” in Bahasa Indonesia clause. It was only different in the use of verb, such as “lived” as verb showed the past tense of “live” in English, while in Bahasa Indonesia predicate “tinggal“ did not showed tense. “In the Riddle House” in English there was preposition “in” and article “the” found. In Bahasa Indonesia “di Rumah Riddle” only preposition “di” found because Bahasa Indonesia did not have article (a, an, the). The function of verb and predicate were similar. According to Wren and Martin, verb is functioned to tell about what a subject is, what a subject done, or what a subject does. According to Supriyadi, predicate functioned to tell about what a subject is or what a subject has done. So it could be concuded that the function of verb and prdicate were similar, both to tell about what a subject is or what a subject does/done. And the function of adverb and keterangan were similar as well, both functioned to tell about where something hsppered or in what situation.

	The similarities were in the clause structure and function of every structure. Relative pronoun “which” in English and relative pronoun “yang” in Bahasa Indonesia referred to objects in clauses, both in English and Bahasa Indonesia. Verb in English referred to the “his walking stick” that should be functioned as subject of the clause but it became relative pronoun. Predicate in Bahasa Indonesia referred to “tongkatnya” that should be functioned as subject in the clause in Bahasa Indonesia but it became relative pronoun. Adverb of place in English referred to the position of the “walking stick” as the object in the previous clause, and keterangan tempat in Bahasa Indonesia referred to the position of the “tongkat” as the object in previous clause too. The verb “was propped” in English followed by “was” as auxiliary verb, the predicate “bersandar” in Bahasa Indonesia did not follow by auxiliary verb. Bahasa Indonesia does not have auxiliary verb (is, am, are, was, were) in sentence.
3	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Conj. + O Example : that was not taken up by the large, empty cage.	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + Konj + O Example : yang tidak ditempati oleh sangkar besar kosong

	The similarities were found in the structure of the function of every structure. In English, relative pronoun “which” was found that referred to the object “his desk” in the clause in English. In Bahasa Indonesia, relative pronoun “yang” was found referred to the object “mejanya” in the clause in Bahasa Indonesia. “was not taken up” functioned as verb in English. “tidak ditempati” functioned as predicate. Some part was found in the verb in English such as auxiliary verb “was” and negation “not” before the verb “taken up”. Leech (2006) in Masagus stated that negation functioned to give negative form of a verb. In Bahasa Indonesia, “tidak” functioned as negation and “ditempati” functioned as the verb. The difference was only in the used of the auxiliary verb “was”, but the function of the verb in English and predicate in Bahasa Indonesia were similar.
4.	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O + C Example : who hated and despised magic in any form	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + O + Pel Example : yang membenci dan meremehkan sihir dalam berbagai bentuk

	The similarities laid in the clause structures and function. In English, relative pronoun “who” was found that referred to Muggle in the clause. In Bahasa Indonesia, relative pronoun “yang” was found that referred to “Muggle” as well. The verb “hated and despised” meant “membenci dan meremehkan” and functioned as predicate in Bahasa Indonesia. This is actually similar but in English verb, the adding of suffix –ed show the past tense of the verb, while Bahasa Indonesia does not have past tense.
5	Clause 3 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O + C Example : who had already finished his own grapefruit quarter Who = Relative pronoun referred to Dudley	Clause 3 : Rel. Pron + P + O + Pel Example : yang sudah menghabiskan jeruk miliknya seperempat Yang = Relative pronoun

	This clause structure in English and Bahasa Indonesia were totally same. The difference only found in the used of verb, not in the function of every structure. In English verb “had already finished” has auxiliary verb “had” which meant “sudah” in Bahasa Indonesia, “already” as the adverb of time and verb “finished” which meant “selesai” in Bahasa Indonesia. The use of auxiliary verb “had” in English indicated that the verb has happened, same with Bahasa Indonesia, the word “sudah” is the kind of kata keterangan meant that predicate has happened in the past. The adverb “already” showed that the verb has happened not long ago. While in Bahasa Indonesia there is no adverb of time found.
6	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O Example : which had settled in his hair and mustache Which = Relative pronoun referred to white dust Had settled = Verb In his hair and mustache = Adverb of place	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + O Example = yang sudah menutupi rambut dan kumisnya Yang = Relative pronoun referred to debu putih Menutupi = Predikat Rambut dan kumisnya = Objek

	The similarities were in the structure and function of this clause. In English, relative pronoun “which” was found that explained the object as hidden subject “white dust”, and relative pronoun “yang” referred to the “debu putih” as the object in Bahasa Indonesia.
7	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + Adv + V Example : who merely nodded Who = Relative pronoun referred to Merely = Adverb of manner referred to nodded Nodded = Verb	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + K + P. Example : yang dengan malas mengangguk Yang = Relative pronoun Dengan malas = Keterangan cara referred to mengangguk Mengangguk = Predikat
	All of the functions and clause structures were similar in this clause. Relative pronoun “who” in English referred to “Fred and George” as the object of Clause 1 in English so is the relative pronoun “yang” in Clause 1 in Bahasa Indonesia.
8	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O Example : who was wearing a long flowery nightgown Who = Relative pronoun referred to a very old wizard Was wearing = Verb	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + O Example : yang memakai baju tidur panjang berbunga Yang = Relative Pronoun referred to penyihir yang sangat tua

	A long flowery nightgown = Object	Memakai = Predikat Baju tidur panjang berbunga = Objek
	The similarities were in the structure and function of the structure. relative pronoun “who” in English referred to the object as hidden subject “wizard” in the phrase “very old wizard”. In Bahasa Indonesia, the relative pronoun “yang” also referred to the objek “penyihir” in the phrase “penyihir yang sangat tua”. The difference is only in the used of auxiliary verb “was” and suffix –ing in the verb “was wearing” in English, in Bahasa Indonesia there is no auxiliary verb and in Bahasa Indonesia only has prefix me- in the verb “memakai”
	The similarities were in the clause structure and function. In English,

	relative pronoun “which” was functioned to explain the object “compartment door” as the hidden subject. In Bahasa Indonesia, the relative pronoun referred to the objek “pintu pemisah” in the clause in Bahasa Indonesia. The position of the subject in English and Bahasa Indonesia would make different. In English, the subject placed in the middle of the clause, but in Bahasa Indonesia the subject placed at the end of the clause.
10	<table border="1"> <tr> <td> Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv. Example : who has lasted more than three terms Who = Relative Pronoun referred to A Defense of the Dark Art teacher Has lasted = Verb More than three years = Adverb of time </td> <td> Clause 2 : Rel. Pron. + P + K Example : yang bertahan lebih dari 3 semester Yang = Relative pronoun referred to guru Pertahanan Terhadap Ilmu Hitam Bertahan = Predikat Lebih dari tiga semester = Keterangan waktu </td> </tr> </table>	Clause 2 : Rel. 	The similarities were the function of relative pronoun. In english relative pronoun referred to a “Defense of the Dark Art teacher” as the object and hidden subject in English clause. In Bahasa Indonesia, the relative pronoun also explain “guru Pertahanan Terhadap Ilmu Hitam” as the object of the clause. The used of “has” as auxiliary verb that showed something has happened in the past make a little different in Bahasa Indonesia.

11	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv + O + Adv Example : who had come to find them at their cottage Who = Relative pronoun referred to Voldemort Had come = Verb To find = Adverb of manner referred to had come Them = Object At their cottage = Adverb of place referred to had come	Clause 2 : Pron. + P + K + O + K Example : yang datang mencari mereka di pondok mereka Yang = relative pronoun referred to Voldemort Datang = Predikat Mencari = Keterangan cara Mereka = Objek Di pondok mereka = Keterangan tempat
	The similarities were in the function and structure of the clause in English and Bahasa Indonesia. Relative pronoun “who” functioned to explain “Voldemort” in English and as the hidden subject, and relative pronoun “yang” functioned to explain “Voldemort” as the object in clauses in English and Bahasa Indonesia. The difference only in the appearance of “had” as the auxiliary verb that showed the verb “come” has done in the past.
12	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + S + V + Adv	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + S + P + K.

	The similarities were in the structure and function of structure in this clause. The relative pronoun functioned to explain “Ron” as the object

	and hidden subject of the English clause. In Bahasa Indonesia, relative pronoun “yang” was used to explain “Ron” as the object in Bahasa Indonesia adjective clause. But the verb in English used auxiliary verb “was” and suffix –ing that indicated this verb has done in the past but still going. While in Bahasa Indonesia, “sedang duduk” indicated that the verb is happening in the present time.
14	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + V + Adv Example : who were dancing nearby Who = Relative pronoun referred to Hermione and Krum Were dancing = Verb Nearby = Adverb of place referred to dancing	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + K Example : yang berdansa di dekat situ Yang = Relative pronoun referred to Hermione dan Krum Berdansa = Predikat
	The similarities were laid in the function of the relative pronoun and the structure of the clause. Relative pronoun “who” functioned to explain “Hermione and Krum” as the object and hidden subject of the English clause. Relative pronoun “yang” functioned to explain “Hermione dan Krum” as the object in the clause of Bahasa Indonesia. English has auxiliary verb “were” as the indication of past tense while in Bahasa Indonesia there is no past tense.
15	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + C	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + Pel

	The similarities laid in the function of the relative pronoun in English and Bahasa Indonesia. Relative pronoun “which” functioned to explained “splashing water” as the object and hidden subject of the English clause (the noun here is water) and relative pronoun “yang” functioned as relative pronoun that explained “percikan air” (the noun is air) in the clause in Bahasa Indonesia.

	The similarities laid in the function of the relative pronoun. The relative pronoun “who” functioned to explain “Harry” as the object and hidden subject in English clause. The relative pronoun “yang” functioned to explain “Harry” as the object of Bahasa Indonesia clause. A little difference could be seen at the verb in English and Bahasa Indonesia clauses. In English, the verb showed the past tense form, but in Bahasa Indonesia did not.
17	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv + Adv Example : who was now standing nervously next to Harry’s bed Who = Relative pronoun referred to Dobby Was now standing = Verb Nervously = Adverb of manner referred to standing Next to Harry’s bed = Adverb of place referred to standing	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + K + K Example : yang sekarang sedang berdiri dengan gugup di sebelah tempat tidur Harry Yang = Relative pronoun referred to Dobby Sekarang sedang berdiri = Predikat Dengan gugup = Keterangan cara referred to berdiri Di sebelah tempat tidur Harry =

		Keterangan tempat referred to berdiri
	The similarities laid in the function of the relative pronoun. The relative pronoun “who” and “yang” referred to Dobby as the object and hidden subject in the clauses in English and Bahasa Indonesia. The difference only in the adverb in English and Keterangan in Bahasa Indonesia. Adverb of manner in English marked with suffix -ly.
18	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O Example : who was gaping at Snape’s face Who = Relative pronoun referred to Harry Was gaping = Verb At Snape’s face = Object	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + O Example : yang terpaku pada wajah Snape Yang = Relative pronoun referred to Harry Terpaku = Predikat Pada wajah Snape = Objek
	The similarities were in the function of the relative clause and the clause structure in both languages. Relative clause “who” in English referred to Harry as the object and hidden subject, and relative clause “yang” referred to the object Harry as the object in Bahasa Indonesia. The difference only in the form of the verb in English which has auxiliary verb and suffix -ing and in Bahasa Indonesia only has prefix -ter.

19	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O Example : who had tortured Mr. and Mrs. Longbottom Who = Relative pronoun referred to the people Had tortured = Verb Mr. and Mrs. Longbottom = Object	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + V + O Example : yang telah menyiksa Mr. dan Mrs. Longbottom Yang = Relative pronoun referred to orang-orang Telah menyiksa = Predikat Mr. dan Mrs. Longbottom = Objek
	The similarities were placed in the function of the relative pronoun. Relative pronoun “who” in English functioned to explained “the people” as the object and hidden subject. And relative pronoun “yang” explained “orang-orang” as the object and hidden subect of the clause in Bahasa Indonesia. Auxiliary verb “had” meant “sudah” in Bahasa Indonesia which indicated that the verb had happened in the past. It also used past tense in the verb in English.
20	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O + Adv Example : that had haunted his nightmares for three years	Clause 2 : yang sudah menghantui mimpi buruknya selama tiga tahun Yang = Relative pronoun referred to wajah itu

	That = Relative pronoun referred to the face Had haunted = Verb His nightmares = Object For three years = Adverb of time referred to had haunted	Sudah menghantui = Predikat Mimpi buruknya = Objek Selama tiga tahun = Keterangan waktu referred to sudah menghantui
	The similarities were in the form of structure and the function of relative pronoun in this clause. The relative pronoun “that” referred to “the face” as the object and hidden subject in English, and relative pronoun “yang” referred to the object “wajah” in the clause in Bahasa Indonesia.
	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv Example : who was upon the ground Who = Relative pronoun referred to Wormtail Was = Verb-be Upon the ground = Adverb of place	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + K Example : yang tergeletak di tanah Yang = Relative pronoun referred to Wormtail Tergeletak = Predikat Di tanah = Keterangan tempat
21	The similarities were in the function and clause structure in this data. The function of relative pronoun in English was to explained “Wormtail” as the object and hidden subject in Clause 2, and in Bahasa

	Indonesia relative pronoun “yang” functioned to explained “Wormtail” as the object in Clause 2 in Bahasa Indonesia. In English, only verb-be found, but in Bahasa Indonesia, there was predikat “tergeletak” found.
22	Clause 2 : Rel Pron (S) + V + Adv + Conj + Adv Example = who yawned very widely and obviously Who = Relative pronoun referred to Harry Yawned = Verb Very widely = Adverb of manner and adverb of degree referred to yawned And = Conjunction Obviously = Adverb of manner to yawned	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + K + K Example : yang menguap dengan sangat lebar dan dengan terang-terangan. Yang = Relative pronoun referred to Harry Menguap = Predikat Dengan sangat lebar = Keterangan cara dan keterangan derajat referred to menguap Dan = Konjungsi Dengan terang-terangan = Keterangan cara referred to menguap
	The similarities were in the function of relative pronoun and the structure in both languages. The function of relative pronouns in both languages were to explain Harry as the object, both in English and Bahasa Indonesia. The similarity also found in the adverb and

	keterangan, it has been known that adverb and keterangan in Bahasa Indonesia were similar. In English, there were two kinds of adverbs found. “Very” marked the adverb of degree, and suffix –ly marked the abverb of manner. In Bahasa Indonesia there were two kinds of keterangan found, “dengan” marked keterangan cara and “sangat” marked keterangan derajat.
23	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv Example : which would finish on the day of the third task Which = Relative pronoun referred to their exams Would finish = Verb On the day of the third task = Adverb of time referred to finish	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + K Example : yang akan selesai pada hari Tugas Ketiga Yang = Relative pronoun referred to ujian mereka Akan selesai = Predikat Pada hari Tugas Ketiga = Keterangan waktu referred to akan selesai
	The similarity was in the function of the relative pronoun and the clause structure. The relative pronoun “whch” referred to “their exam” (the noun or object here was exam) as the object and hidden subject. And the function of the relative pronoun “yang” functioned to explain the object “ujian mereka” (here the pronomina was ujian).
24	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + A + Conj. + A	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + A + Konj. + A

	Example : that has three floors and several turrets That = Relative pronoun referred to a tent Has = Verb Three floors = Adverb of quantity And = Conjunction Several turrets = Adverb of quantity	Example : yang memiliki tiga lantai dan beberapa kubah. Yang = Relative pronoun referred to sebuah tenda Memiliki = Predikat Tiga lantai = Keterangan jumlah Dan = Konjungsi Beberapa kubah = Keterangan jumlah
	The similarity were in the function of the relative pronoun the clause structure in English and Bahasa Indonesia. The relative pronoun “that” functioned to explained “a tent” as the object and hidden subject in Clause 2 in English. The relative pronoun “yang” functioned to explain the objek “sebuah tenda” in Bahasa Indonesia.
25	Clause 3 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv + C Example : which was swelling slowly to the size of a salami Which = Relative pronoun referred	Clause 3 : Pron. + K + P + Pel Example : yang perlahan-lahan membesar seukuran salami. Yang = Relative pronoun referred to seekor siput

	The similarities were in function and structure of the clauses in English and Bahasa Indonesia. The function of relative pronoun “which” was to explain “a slug” as the object and hidden subject in English. A little difference could be seen in the verb in English and predikat in Bahasa Indonesia. In English, there was auxiliary verb “was” as the indication of past tense. But in Bahasa Indonesia, there was no auxiliary verb.
26	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv + Adv Example : which buzzed angrily against the glass Which = Relative pronoun referred to the beetle Buzzed = Verb Angrily = Adverb of manner referred to buzzed Against the glass = Adverb of place referred to buzzed	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + K + K Example : yang berdengung dengan marah dari balik kaca Yang = Relative pronoun referred to “kumbang” Berdengung = Predikat Dengan marah = Keterangan cara referred to berdengung Dari balik kaca = Keterangan tempat referred to berdengung

	The similarities were in the function of the relative clause and the structure of the clause in English and Bahasa Indonesia. Relative pronoun “which” referred to the “the beetle” as the object and hidden subject of the clause in English. The relative pronoun “yang” functioned to explain “kumbang” as the object in Bahasa Indonesia.

2. To Explain Subject

1	English	Bahasa Indonesia
	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O Example : who had ruined all these lives Who = Relative pronoun referred to He Had ruined = Verb All these life = Object	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + O Example : yang telah menghabiskan semua kehidupan ini Yang = Relative pronoun referred to Dia Telah menghabiskan = Predikat Semua kehidupan ini = Objek
	The similarities were in the function of the relative pronoun in both languages. The relative pronoun “who” referred to “He” as the subject and hidden subject in English clause. And relative pronoun “yang” referred to “Dia” as the subject in Bahasa Indonesia clause.

4.2 Table of the Dissimilarities in Subordinate Adjective Clause in English and Bahasa Indonesia

1. The difference laid in the structure and function of adjective clause

No.	English	Bahasa Indonesia
1	Clause 3 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv Example : which were on the bedside table Which = Relative pronoun referred to his glasses Were = Verb-be On the bedside table = Adverb of place	Clause 3 : Rel. Pron + P + K + K Example : yang terletak di atas meja di sebelah tempat tidurnya Yang = Relative pronoun referred to “kacamatanya” Terletak = Predikat Di atas meja = Keterangan tempat Di sebelah tempat tidurnya = Keterangan tempat
	The differences were placed in the clause structure and in the function of the structures in English and Bahasa Indonesia. First of all, it has been known that the function of adverb in English and keterangan in Bahasa Indonesia were similar. In the adjective clause above, there was one adverb “on the bedside table” found. But in Bahasa Indonesia, there were two keterangan “di atas meja” and “di sebelah tempat tidurnya” found. Which meant it was contrasted with English that have one adverb instead. The difference was caused by two prepositions “di” in Bahasa Indonesia.

2	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + V + Adv + O + C Example : who tried to keep his expression neutral Who = Relative pronoun referred to Harry Tried = Verb To keep = Adverb His expression = Object Neutral = Object Complement	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + Pel + O + Pel Example : yang mencoba menjaga ekspresinya tetap datar Yang = Relative pronoun referred to Harry Mencoba = Predikat Menjaga = Pelengkap Ekspresinya = Objek Tetap datar = Pelengkap
	The difference could be seen in the clause structure in English and Bahasa Indonesia. In English there was an adverb “to keep” found. This was an adverb because this was followed and explained the verb “tried”. To keep means “menjaga” in Bahasa Indonesia but it was functioned as pelengkap that complete the predicate. It has been known that adverb was similar with keterangan in Bahasa Indonesia and pelengkap is similar to complement. But adverb in English formed as pelengkap in Bahasa Indonesia which was contrast.

	The difference laid in the function of adverb in English and pelengkap in Bahasa Indonesia. The difference caused by the translation from English into Bahasa Indonesia. Grinned in Bahasa Indonesia could translated as menyeringai but in Bahasa Indonesia it translated as tersenyum, and back in Bahasa Indonesia could be translated as kembali but it translated as balas. So, grinned back could be translated as menyeringai kembali but in Bahasa Indonesia it turned out as balas tersenyum. In English, “back” functioned as adverb because it followed the verb “grinned” but contrast in Bahasa Indonesia “balas” functioned as pelengkap that completed the predicate.
4	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O + Adv Example : who was holding a moldy-looking old boot in his other hand Who = Relative pronoun referred to a ruddy face wizard Was holding = Verb A moldy-looking old boot = Object	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + O + Pel + K Example : yang memegang sepatu bot usang di tangan satunya Yang = Relative clause referred to seorang penyihir berwajah kemerahan Sepatu bot = Objek

	In his other hand = Adverb of place	Usang = Pelengkap Di tangan satunya = Keterangan tempat
	The difference found in the structure in English and Bahasa Indonesia. In Bahasa Indonesia, “usang” identified as pelengkap . Pelengkap is similar with complement in English. But there is no complement found in English.
5	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + A + A + O Example : who were obviously very important wizard Who = Relative pronoun referred to people Were = Verb-be Obviously = Adverb of manner Very important = Adverb of degree Wizards = Object	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + K + O + K Example : yang jelas sekali para penyihir sangat penting Yang = Relative pronoun referred to orang-orang Jelas sekali = Keterangan derajat Para penyihir = Object Sangat penting = Keterangan derajat
	In English, there was verb-be found that functioned as “verb” of the clause. It has been known before that verb is similar with predikat in Bahasa Indonesia. But contrastly, there was no predikat found in Bahasa Indonesia adjective clause.
6	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + V + Adv + C	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + Pel

	The difference was in the structure of the clause. In English, there was an adverb of manner “stonily” found. According to Wren and Martin (2000) adverb of manner is functioned to show something “how or in what way”, it was similar with keterangan cara which according to Noortyani (2017) keterangan cara berfungsi menjelaskan bagaimana dan dengan cara apa. But contrast in Bahasa Indonesia, there was no keterangan cara found in the clause.
7	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O + Prep + O Example : who were discussing those Hogwart’s students of seventeen or over who might be entering Who = Relative pronoun referred to Dean and Seamus	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron. + P + Konj. + O + Prep + O Example : yang sedang berdiskusi tentang murid-murid Hogwarts yang berusia tujuh belas atau orang-orang yang mungkin mendaftar Yang = Relative pronoun

	The differences was found in the structure of adjective clause in English and Bahasa Indonesia. In Bahasa Indonesia, conjunction “tentang” was found before the object “murid-murid Hogwarts yang berusia tujuh belas tahun”. In English, there is no conjunction found. The object stand alone as direct object in this clause.
8	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O Example : who stared at him Who = Relative pronoun referred to Myrtle Stared = Verb At = Preposition Him = Object	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + Pel Example : yang melihat ke arahnya Yang = Relative pronoun referred to Myrtle Melihat = Predikat Ke = Preposisi Arahnya = Pelengkap
	The differences were laid in the structure and function in this clause. In

	English, “him” stand alone as an object. But in Bahasa Indonesia, “-nya” in the word “arahnya” functioned as pronoun that bound together with the word “arah” as pelengkap .
9	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + O Example = which ruffled his large, bushy mustache Which = Relative pronoun referred to a great sigh Ruffled = Verb His large bushy mustache = Object	Clause 2 : Konj + P + O Example : yang menggoyangkan kumis besarnya Yang = Konjungsi Menggoyangkan = Predikat Kumis besarnya = Objek
	The difference found in the function of relative pronoun in English and in Bahasa Indonesia. In English, “which” functioned as relative pronoun that referred to “a great sigh” (sigh functioned as noun) while in Bahasa Indonesia “yang” functioned as conjunction that connected main clause and subordinate clause but it could be relative pronoun as well that referred to “napas” as the complement or pelengkap in Bahasa Indonesia. According to Wren and Martin (2000) this is called “Conjunctive pronoun”.

	The difference laid in the function and structure in this clause. In English clause, the relative pronoun functioned to explain the object in the main clause, “a very nasty silence” was placed at the end of the clause as object, but relative pronoun in Bahasa Indonesia was explained “keheningan” which functioned as subject of the main clause.
11	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv. + O Example : which sounded oddly like Lockhart Which = Relative pronoun referred to a loud false cough Sounded = Verb Oddly = Adverb of manner referred to sounded Like = Preposition Lockhart = Object	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + Pel + O Example : yang terdengar aneh seperti Lockhart. Yang = Relative pronoun referred to batuk palsu yang keras Terdengar = Predikat Aneh = Pelengkap referred to terdengar Seperti Lockhart = Objek
	The differences was in the clause structure in English and Bahasa

	Indonesia. There was adverb of manner “oddly” found in English. “Oddly” if translated in Bahasa Indonesia would have meaning as “dengan aneh” but in Bahasa Indonesia it was only translated as “aneh” that functioned as pelengkap that complete the predicate “terdengar”.
12	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron (S) + V + Adv Example : who continued to sob Who = Relative pronoun referred to Wormtail Continued = Verb To sob = Adverb	Clause 2 : Rel. Pron + P + Pel Example : yang terus terisak Yang = Relative pronoun referred to Wormtail Terus = Predikat Terisak = Pelengkap
	The difference was in the structure in this clause in English and Bahasa Indonesia. The function of the relative pronouns were similar in both languages, but the structure was different. Here, “to sob” meant “terisak” functioned as adverb in English, but in Bahasa Indonesia functioned as pelengkap .

	The difference was only in the structure in English and Bahasa Indonesia. The function of relative pronoun in English and Bahasa Indonesia were similar. Relative pronoun “who” was referred to “Mrs. Norris” as the object and hidden subject in English clause. Relative pronoun “yang” functioned as the adjective that explained the object “Mrs. Norris” as the object of in Bahasa Indonesia adjective clause. But the adverb “blankly” in English was functioned as pelengkap in Bahasa Indonesia which contrast because the function of adverb in English supposed to be similar with keterangan.

	The difference was in the structure of the clauses in both languages. The function of the relative pronoun in English and Bahasa Indonesia were similar. The relative pronoun “who” functioned to explain “Harry” as the object and hidden subject in English clause. Relative pronoun “yang” in Bahasa Indonesia functioned as the adjective that explained “Harry” as the object of Bahasa Indonesia clause. But the difference found was the function of adverb in English contrast with the function of pelengkap in Bahasa Indonesia.

Discussion

The researcher had analyzed complex sentences in novel of Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire and out of 37 chapters, there were only 34 chapters have complex sentences with adjective clauses. The complex sentences were divided into two and three clauses each. According to basic sentence structures by Quirk and Greenbaum in Sujatna, SS, and Tisna Prabasmoro (2005), that there were seven basic structures in analyzing sentences:

1. S-V-A (Subject – Verb – Adverb)
2. S-V-C (Subject – Verb – Complement)
3. S-V-O (Subject – Verb – Object)
4. S-V-O-A (Subject – Verb – Object – Adverb)
5. S-V-O-C (Subject – Verb – Object – Complement)
6. S-V-O-O (Subject – Verb – Object – Object)
7. S-V (Subject – Verb)

In Bahasa Indonesia, according to Noortyani (2017) there were five parts of basic sentence structure: Subjek – Predikat – Objek – Keterangan – Pelengkap but in analyzing sentences, those five parts were not always complete.

From 68 complex sentences that divided into 150 clauses, there were only 44 clauses functioned as subordinate adjective clause. From 44 subordinate adjective clauses, there were only 27 clauses which similar in English and Bahasa Indonesia. The rest 17 clauses were different in English and Bahasa Indonesia.

C. Research Findings

After analyzing sentences in the novel Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire both in English and Bahasa Indonesia version, out of 37 chapters, there were only 33 chapters had complex sentence. And out of 33 chapters, 68 complex sentences were found. From 68 complex sentences that divided into clauses, there were 150 clauses found. And out of 150 clauses, there were only 44 clauses that functioned as subordinate adjective clause. 27 of them were similar in English and Bahasa Indonesia, and 17 of them were different in English and Bahasa Indonesia.

1. Parts of basic sentence structure in English and Bahasa Indonesia were not always complete in a sentence.
2. Complex sentences in English and Bahasa Indonesia were mostly found in active and passive sentences in the novel, not in the conversation among the characters.
3. Subordinate adjective clauses in English were followed by relative pronouns such as: that, who, whom, whose, which, that functioned to explain the main clause.
4. Subordinate adjective clauses in Bahasa Indonesia were followed by relative pronoun “yang”.
5. Relative pronouns meant “yang” in Bahasa Indonesia but when they become conjunctions they could have several meanings.

6. Adjective in English was mostly placed before the noun (subject/object)
7. Adjective in Bahasa Indonesia was mostly placed after the noun (subject/object).
8. Verb in English had the same function as predicate in Bahasa Indonesia.
9. Verb was always followed by adverb. Adverb could be formed as another verb behind a verb or using -ly, or place or condition that explain a verb. While in Bahasa Indonesia, predicate was mostly followed by pelengkap.
10. Pelengkap or complement could be formed in a phrase or even a single word.
11. Adverb in English had the same function as keterangan in Bahasa Indonesia.
12. In this novel, adverb of manner and adverb of place were the common used adverbs.
13. English and Bahasa Indonesia had similar basic sentence structures but there were some conditions that made them different. For example in Bahasa Indonesia, adjective was placed after the noun (subject/object) while in English adjective was placed before the noun (subject/object). There were some phrases that did not need conjunction in English, but in Bahasa Indonesia a conjunction must added so the meaning would made sense.

For example in Chapter 37

English : Nobody ask him questions

Bahasa Indonesia : Tidak ada siapapun yang memberinya pertanyaan

Yang in Bahasa Indonesia was functioned as conjunction that connected Subject “tidak ada siapapun” and predicate “memberinya”.

Tidak ada siapapun memberinya pertanyaan does not have complete meaning.

14. Relative pronoun in English could be a conjunction in Bahasa Indonesia.

For example:

Clause 1 : Uncle Vernon gave a great sigh ➤ S + V + C. Clause 2 : which ruffled his large, bushy mustache and picked up his spoon. ➤ Rel. Pron + V + O + Conj. + V + O.	Clause 1 : Paman Vernon menghela napas dengan keras ➤ S + P + Adv. Clause 2 : yang menggoyangkan kumis besarnya dan mengangkat sendoknya ➤ Konj. + P + O + Konj. + P + O.
---	---

15. Adverb of place in English could be a condition or a situation but in Bahasa Indonesia it could be a place.

16. The structure of adjective clause in English was:

Rel. Pron (S) + V + ...

The structure of adjective clause in Bahasa Indonesia was:

Rel. Pron + P + ...

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

After analyzing the data, the conclusions could be taken such as:

1. Complex sentence could be recognized when a sentence had one main clause and more than one subordinate clauses.
2. Subordinate adjective clause was functioned to explain the main clause (object or subject in the main clause) and give clearer explanation.
3. Complex sentences were mostly found in active or passive sentences, not in a conversation.
4. English and Bahasa Indonesia had similar basic sentence structure: S – V – O – C in English and S – P – O – K in Bahasa Indonesia.
5. Relative pronoun could be a conjunction in Bahasa Indonesia.
6. Complex sentence was usually marked with subordinate conjunctions and relative pronoun.
7. Subordinate adjective clause was marked with relative pronouns.
8. In a certain condition there was an adverb which functioned as complement in Bahasa Indonesia but contrasted in English it was an adverb.
9. Adverb of place in English could be a condition or a situation but in Bahasa Indonesia it could be a place.

10. There were some phrases that did not need conjunction in English, but in Bahasa Indonesia a conjunction must be added so the meaning would make sense.

11. According to Quirk and Greenbaum (1987), S and V were the essential structures that a clause must have. So in every clause, there must be a subject and a verb found. In the structure of adjective clause in English, the structure is Rel. Pron (S) + V +...

It could be concluded that the relative pronoun played a role as the pronoun and the subject, or usually called hidden subject. In Bahasa Indonesia, according to Noortyani (2017), sebuah klausa setidaknya memiliki unsur S dan P. But in adjective clause in Bahasa Indonesia according to Supriyadi (2014), unsur P-lah yang menjadi adjektiva di dalam klausa adjektiva. So the relative pronoun in Bahasa Indonesia was only depend on the relative pronoun and the predicate.

12. Relative pronoun that could be functioned as conjunction and relative pronoun called “conjunctive pronoun”.

B. Suggestion

Based on the result of the research, the suggestion can be concluded as follows:

1. This research is prioritized for students or English learner, so the researcher hopes that this research could be used as further information in studying English, for teacher and university as the further information in teaching about sentences, and for the next researcher as a guideline when they have the same idea of the same reserach but in different object.

2. This research is shown to the readers, and others as further information to gain knowledge about sentence structure and to understand kind of sentences and clauses.
