The objectives of the study were described the types of speech act and analyze the dominant speech act produced by the main character in The Equalizer movie script. In addition, this study was also to found and explained the purpose of the main character using speech act. The research method in this study used descriptive qualitative method. Based on the result of this research, it was found totally 114 speech acts used by main character. There were 43 representatives, 44 directives, 11 commissives, 16 expressives and there were no declarations. The most dominant speech act used by the main character was directives. The main character tends to used directives because he wanted to make the hearer do something based on his said.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background of The Study

Communication is one way for someone to be able to express the sentence he wants to say. From the way that is done, of course, there are tools used in carrying out this communication. Language is one of the tools in communication. In many forms of communication, people need language more to convey their words and also to express themselves.

English is set as an international language. English is designated as an international language because English is the second most widely spoken language in the world. Supported by the fact written on ruangguru.com (2016) that 400 million native speakers, 2 billion people learn it as a second language and around 2.4 billion people in the world use English. People all over the world make English an important second language for them to learn after their mother tongue. One country that views the importance of English for the progress of their country to survive in the current era of globalization is Indonesia because English plays an important role in global interaction, so Indonesian need to learn English.

One way to learn English can be through conversation. To build better conversation, learning about language needs to be deepened, such as studying the context meaning of an utterance, whether it's a word uttered by the speaker or as a listener as the person receiving the utterance. The study of how context contributes to the meaning are pragmatic.

The study of pragmatics is very influential on every word spoken by the speaker. According to Fitriani & Tri (2018:157), pragmatics is a branch of linguistics that discusses what belongs to the structure of language as a means of communication between speakers and listeners, and as a reference for language signs on the "extra lingual" things discussed. A branch of pragmatics that studied how words can affect to an action is speech act.

The speech act is a variant of the branch of pragmatics which was initiated by Austin, Jacob L. Mey (2001:92). According to Geroge (1996:47) when people express themselves, they not only produce utterances that contain grammatical structures and words, they also take action through those utterances. Then, in further research, a researcher named George Yule (1996) in his book entitled "Pragmatics" categorizes speech acts into five classifications: the first, Representatives (we tell people how things are), the second, directives (we try to get them to do things), the third, commissives (we commit ourselves to do things), the fourth, expressives (we express our feelings and attitudes), and the last, declarations (we bring about changes in the world through our utterances). Based on the theory of George the writer will analyze the speech act in movie script.

Based on the theory that has been described previously, the reader capable to understand every word in every scene that appears in a film. For example, when the main character says "no more chips" it generally means that someone is running out of chips, but in the movie The Equalizer, the main character advises his friend not to eat chips because his friend is on a weight loss program. From this example, the type of speech act that appears is directives, because the word is a command.

In this case, the researcher is interested in examining this matter because the problem appeared in one of movie review site. In the site, this film getting a rating not good enough. This data is obtaining from the official movie review website www.rottentomatoes.com, which is a site that displays the rating of a film based on the review of the viewers. On this site, The Equalizer movie gets a fairly low rating, with score 3.9 out of 5 average rating with description by 60% good review (Fresh) and 40% bad review (rotten), which means the remaining 40% are not satisfied in enjoying this film.

The gap for this problem appears because there were some review who commented that some of the scenes in this film seemed boring, from these comments the researcher know that some reviewer of The Equalizer movie did not understand or were less interested in seeing the part of the film that only featured the main character when having a dialogue with the cast. another, even though every utterance conveyed by the main character has a deep meaning. It is hoped that with this, the researcher can to examine the speech act in The Equalizer film so that reviewers can find out what types of speech acts appear in the film.

Many reviewer's do not know and understand the speech act contained in a film because many movie enjoyer do not understand speech act in every communication in a film, especially The Equalizer movie which chosen by the researcher in this study. The reason this film is as an object of the research because this film contains meaningful speech in every utterance and this film is one of the popular action films in 2014 because this film is played by a professional actor named Denzel Washington.

Speech acts are commonly observed in conversation. The movie's conversation can be a good example of speech acts because it depicts a complicated case of speech acts to figure out what the main character is doing by saying something. In this context, a movie script is essential because it contains the dialogues utterance by the characters in the film. Because movie scripts are full of dialogues, this study employs that as the study's object. Therefore, The Equalizer movie script is chosen as the object of this research.

The Equalizer is one of the famous action films in 2014 and also a film that presents speech acts as a language phenomenon. The film was written by Richard Wenk and directed by Antoine Fuqua. The main character in The Equalizer is Robert McCall, in the film he is usually called "Bob" played by Denzel Washington. Robert McCall's speech was chosen in this study because Robert McCall has a communicative purpose that is expressed in his speech. Therefore. This film divided into two chapter and the film that will be discussed by the researcher is the first chapter. So, the researcher is interested to analyze the Speech act of the main character in The Equalizer movie script.

B. Identification of Problem

The researcher identified the problem as follows:

1. Many bad review in The Equalizer movie
2. Most reviewer of The Equalizer movie do not understand speech act in The Equalizer movie.

C. Scope and Limitations

Scope and limitations in this research were speech act. This research focused on five types of speech act there were representatives, directives, commissives, expressives and declaration act in The Equalizer movie scripts.

D. Formulation of The Problem

The researcher formulated the problem as follows :

1. What kinds of speech act were found in The Equalizer movie script ?
2. What was the dominant speech act that applied in The Equalizer movie script ?
3. Why was it the dominant speech act in The Equalizer movie script ?

E. The Objective of The Study

The objective of the study was to find out the kinds and the dominant speech act and also explain why it can be the dominant type in The Equalizer movie script.

F. The Significances of The Study

The researcher hopes to provide information clearly to the reader. The significance of this study can be seen as follows:

1. Theoretically

This research helps in learning English about speech act, especially speech act in the movie script.

2. Practically

This study can enrich the reader's knowledge about pragmatic aspects in a film dialogue, especially in action films such as The Equalizer film, and can be used as a reference for other writers who will research this.

CHAPTER II

THE REVIEW OF LITERATURE

A. Theoretical Framework

In order to avoid misunderstandings and ambiguity in understanding the ideas, it is necessary to classify several terms used in this study. This is especially important for readers. As a result, the words below are meant to define the focus of the research.

A.1. Pragmatics

The study of meaning in spoken language and its element is defined as pragmatics. The study of linguistic forms and the users is known as pragmatics. There are several explanations about pragmatics stated by George in his book (1996:3) the first, Pragmatics is the study of meaning as it is conveyed by a speaker and understood by a listener. The second, the study of pragmatics entails understanding what persons mean in a given context and how the context impacts what is said. The third, pragmatics is the study of how more is communicated than is uttered. And the last, pragmatics is the study of the speaker's expression on relative distances. These are all the four areas where pragmatics are focused. He also said pragmatics is the study of the relationship between linguistic forms and the users of those forms.

As for the advantages of studying pragmatics, according to George (1993:4) he states, learning language via pragmatics is that one may explore people's intended meanings, assumptions, purpose or aims, and the kinds of actions (for example, requests) they perform when they speak. In addition, the pragmatics of course also has disadvantages. The big disadvantage of learning pragmatics is that all these very human concepts are extremely difficult to analyze inconsistent and objective way. The big disadvantage of learning pragmatics is that all of these very human concepts are very difficult to analyze impartially and objectively.

Pragmatics is the study of language as a means of human communication which is determined in a social situation. According to Mey in the second edition of his book (2001:6), he states that pragmatics, as the study of the way humans use their language in communication, bases itself on a study of those premises and determines how they affect, and effectual, human use of language use. Hence, pragmatics studies the use of language in human communication as determined by the conditions of society.

There are several factors that should be examined in the context of pragmatics. These elements define pragmatics as a whole. Implicature, Speech act, Presupposition, Context, Adjacency Pairs, Deixis, and Distance are the factors. The focus of this research is speech acts.

A.2. Speech Act

According to Austin (1969) as the creator of speech act theory explain that speech acts are acts that refer to the action performed by produced utterances. In line with this, George (1996: 47) states that speech acts is an action that performed via utterances. As an Addition in Isnawati (2015) states that what people do by saying something is called speech act.

Searle define that the unit of linguistics communication is not, as has generally been supposed, the symbol, word or sentence, or even the token of the symbol, word or sentence, but rather the production or issuance of the symbol, word or sentences in the performance of the speech act (Searle 1969:16)

Austin (in Levinson 1983:236), speech acts are divided into three categories: locution act (saying something with a specific meaning in the traditional sense), illocution act (performing an act to say something/the speaker's intent/the truth of the speech act), and perlocution act (an effect on the feelings, thoughts or actions of either the speaker or the listener). Tutuarima (2018) states that speech acts are the study of the intended meaning of the utterances spoken and written. Moreover, the most significant things in speech act are the message of the speaker's intention, so the hearer understands a message from the speaker. The speech act is divided into three parts; those are a locutionary act, illocutionary act, and perlocutionary act. The speech act is the utterance that the speaker says, or the speaker performs in every speech. The study of speech acts is significant for everyone. The importance of studying speech acts is to make comprehend what message that discovered in every utterance. Rahayu (2019) has quoted by searle explanation that speech act falls into 3 classes that are locutionary, illocutionary and perlocutionary. For Addition in Isnawati (2015) states that what people do by saying something is called speech act.

A.3. The Classification of Speech Act

According to George in his book (1996: 53-55), he defines speech act into five categories, which are still connected to Austin and Searle's understanding of speech act. There are :

a. Representatives

Representatives is the utterances that cause speakers to doubt the proposition's certainty, such as explaining, proposing, boasting, disputing, and defending. In George's book (1996:53) Representatives also known as assertives, he states that Representatives are those kinds of speech acts that state whether or not the speaker accepts the case or not. Based on Finegan (2011:305) states that Representatives is represent a state of affairs: assertions, statements, claims, hypotheses, descriptions, suggestions. Representatives can generally be characterized as true or false. For examples :

1. The earth is round
2. The grape is so sweet

b. Directives

The directive is a speech that wishes to make audiences react to a listener as something to make a listener do it. In George's book (1996:54) states that directives are those kinds of speech acts that speakers use to make someone else do something. In Finegan's book (2011:305) states that Directives are intended to get the addressee to carry out an action such as commands, orders, requests, suggestion, and as an illustration, look down the example:

1. Don't eat that!
2. Can I get your number, please?

c. Commissives

Commissives is an utterance that conveys a promise or an offer, such as promising, swearing, or offering something. In George's book (1996:54) states that directives are those kinds of speech acts that speakers use to commit themselves to take action in the future, based on the promise they have delivered. Based on Finegan (2011:305) Commissives is commit a speaker to a course of action : promises, pledges, threats, vows. For examples:

1. I'll never leave you alone
2. We will come back

d. Expressives

According to George (1996:53) Expressive is the speech that demonstrates the psychological attitudes of the speakers. It's like saying thank you, apologizing, blame. George (1996:53) states that expressives are those kinds of speech act that convey what the speaker. In Finegan's book (2011:305) states that Expressives is indicate the speaker's psychological state or attitude: feels such as greetings, apologize, congratulation, condolences, and thanksgivings. As the examples :

1. I feel really sorry!
2. Thank you so much.

e. Declarations

Declarations are those kinds of speech acts that change the world via their utterance. In the declaration, the speaker has to have a special institutional role, in a specific context, to perform a declaration appropriately. Based on Finegan (2011:305) Declarations is bring about the state of affairs they name, examples of expression such as blessings, hirings, firings, baptism, arrest, marrying, and declaring. For examples

1. Referee : time is over!
2. Captain : attack them!

A.4. The Description of Movie Script

A movie or film is a moving picture that is displayed visually. It is said to be a moving picture because in 1 second of the video there are several picture frames per millisecond. In a film, of course, there is communication interaction between one actor and another, this conversation between players is called dialogue. Dialogue in a film is organized into a document called a script. So, it can be concluded that the film script is a document that contains conversations or dialogues between actors which are arranged based on the time of each event that occurs in the film.

Normally, speech acts can be found in conversation, and the conversation in the text can be found in the script. The conversation in the movie could be a good example of speech acts because it illustrates the complex situation of speech acts to find out what the main character does by saying something. In this case, a movie script is an important aspect of a movie because it includes the dialogues said by the characters in the film. Because movie scripts are full of conversations, this study employs them as the object of study. As a reason, The Equalizer movie script is chosen as the subject of the study.

A.5. The Description of The Equalizer movie

The Equalizer is an action thriller film produced in the United States in 2014 and directed by Antoine Fuqua and based on a screenplay written by Richard Wenk. It begins with the story of a retired government secret agent, who has faked his identity and death. A former agent named Robert McCall (Denzel Washington) is now living a peaceful life, far from bloodshed, and working as a convenience store employee in Boston. Working normally with fixed hours, every day he always spends time in a cafe reading a book after work. That's where he meets Alina or Teri (Chloe Grace Moretz), a sex worker who works for the Russian mafia. Driven by curiosity when Alina didn't show up at the cafe, McCall then visited Alina, who was being treated at the hospital after being beaten by her pimp, Slavi (David Meunier).

Seeing this, McCall decides to go to Slavi to free Alina from her job by paying some money. However, this request was flatly rejected by Slavi. As a result, McCall kills Slavi and a number of his men to free Alina from her job. It turns out, Slavi is a member of the great Russian mafia, Vladimir Pushkin (Vladimir Kulich). Not accepting the treatment received by his men, he pursued and wanted to take revenge on McCall.

The main character in The Equalizer is Robert McCall, in the film he is usually called "Bob" played by Denzel Washington. Robert McCall's speech was chosen in this study because Robert McCall has a communicative purpose that is expressed in his speech. Therefore, The researcher is interested in analyzing The Speech Act of The Main Character in The Equalizer Movie Script.

B. Previous Study

There were some studies related to this research that has been conducted before. The previous study related to this research is in the Journal by Isnawati (2015) on her title journal: "Speech Act Analysis of The Main Character in Shrek Movie Script". He discussed speech acts that are used in the utterance of Shrek, Shrek is the main character in the movie. This research is used descriptive qualitative method. This previous study found that the most dominant type of speech act uttered by Shrek and as the result was directives. Unfortunately, the study was still having a weakness that the writer did not mention the causes.

The second previous study is "Speech Act Analysis of "FROZEN" The Movie Script" by Adinda Srimulya Rahayu, Trisnendri Syahrizal, and Irma Savitri Sadikin in Journal PROJECT (Professional Journal of English Education), Volume 2 No. 5 September 2019. This research aimed to analyze the speech acts of the movie script entitled Frozen. The research design in this study is qualitative method. The writers analyze all types of speech acts (representatives, commissives, directives, declarations, expressives, verdictives) by Finegan (2011). The writers found 294 clauses that contain the type of speech acts, there are representatives (37), commissives (3), directives (32), expressives (10). Each type of the speech acts are delivering different meaning. The results of the research are taken from the script of the character named Anna in Frozen the movie.

The third previous study that related to this research is “An Analysis of Speech Act of Omar Mukhtar’s utterances in lion of the desert movie” by Syukri Rizky and Jelena Golubovic in Journal Englisia, volume 7 No. 2 May 2020. The researcher discussed speech acts that are used in the utterance of Omar Mukhtar’s in Lion of The Desert movie. This research is used descriptive qualitative method to analyze the speech act. The findings revealed four types of speech acts, namely, representative, directive, commissive, and expressive, being identified and classified in Mukhtar’s utterances. The most frequently used type of speech act was representative, which is performed in 56 utterances, followed by a directive act which appears in 53 utterances. Commissive and expressive speech acts emerge in 9 and 7 utterances respectively.

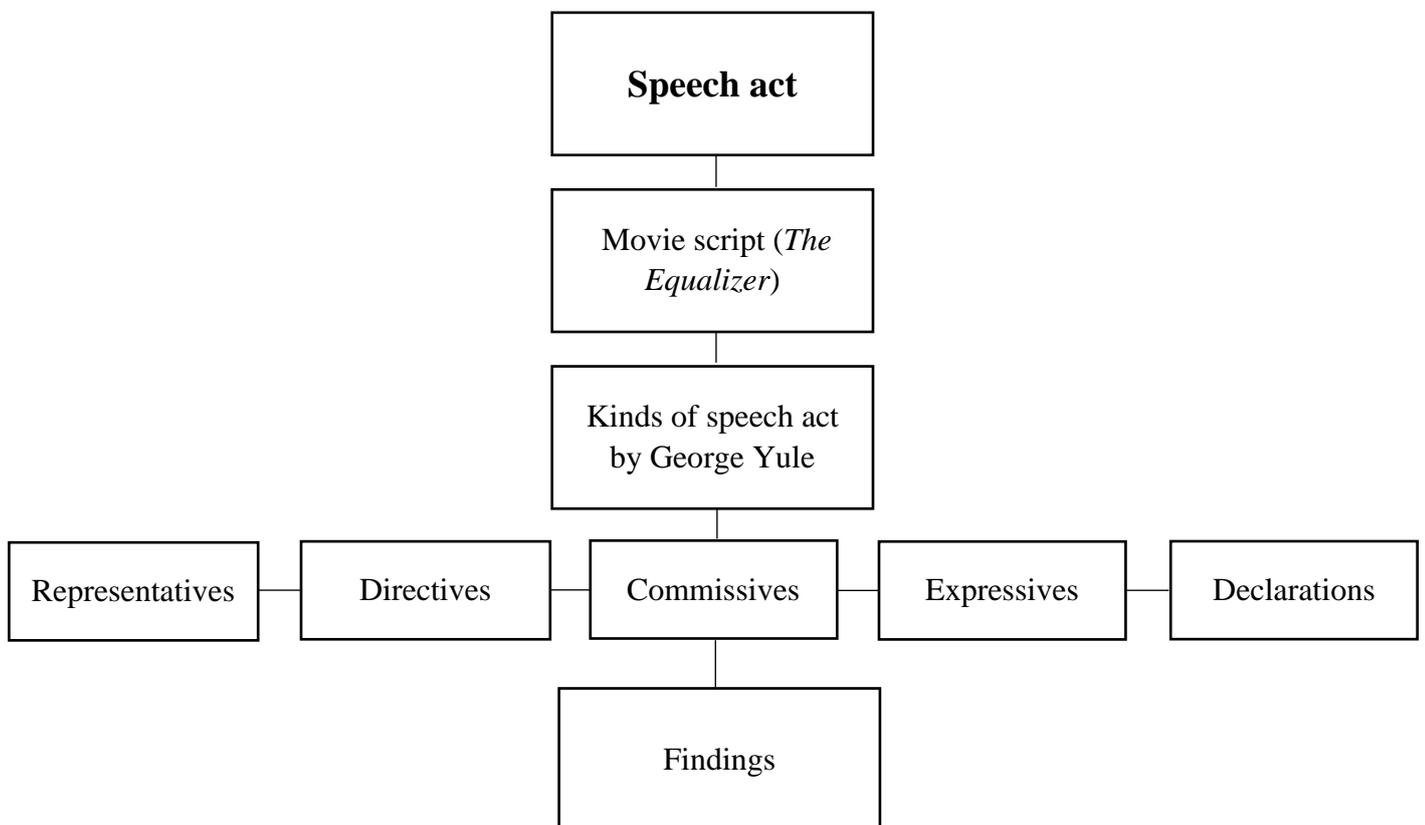

So, the researcher gets interested to conduct the research in analyzing the speech act in The Equalizer Movie Script. The objective of this study is to analyze and find out the classification of speech act and the type of dominant speech act that contains in the conversation that appears on the movie script. The benefits of the research are expected to the reader in conducting research about this study.

C. Conceptual Framework

This research concentrates about speech act analysis in The Equalizer movie script as a tool to interact a communicate must be understood correctly by the speaker and speech partners so that their use does not cause misunderstanding.

In every communication human convey information that is in the form of ideas, intentions, feelings, or emotion directly. Therefore, in every communication process there is what is called speech act. As a result, these events are representatives, directives, commissives, expressives, and declarations.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

A. Research Design

The researcher wants to find the type of speech act and the dominant type speech act that contained in a movie through a movie script so, the researcher was using qualitative method research because the data result in form of description. Qualitative research is a research that produce descriptive data, speech or word and practice that can be realized by the subject itself. According to Perry (2005) cited in Dewi , Hernawan & Apsari (2019), qualitative research is characterized by the verbal description of its data.

Furthermore, this research applied a documentary study because the data was in form of document or written text. According to Denscombe (2007:230), documents can be obtained from the internet such as website pages, home pages, or email and they can be treated like online documents. By applying this method, the researcher collected and described The Speech Act of The Main Character in The Equalizer Movie Script.

B. Source of The Data

The data of this research was taken from The Equalizer movie script. In this study, the researcher found the source of the data that taking from the official website of movie script www.scripts.com.

C. Technique of Collecting Data

The technique for collecting the data was conducted as follow :

1. Reading all the utterances that produced by main characters in The Equalizer movie script.
2. Finding and listing all the word that contained five type of speech act in every utterance by main character.
3. Classifying types of speech act used in The Equalizer movie script that is representatives, directives, commissives, expressives, declaration.
4. Determining the dominant type of speech act used in The Equalizer movie script.

D. Technique of Data Analysis

The researcher was using descriptive study of qualitative research to analyze the data. According to Miles and Huberman (1994:10-11) framework for qualitative data analysis is separates into three major phases. The three phases included data reduction, data display and conclusion drawing and verification.

1. Data Reduction

To obtain comprehension and understanding of the movie script as a whole, the researcher critically read the movie script's contents. The researcher then marked utterances that contain speech acts on the movie script that was analyzed.

2. Data Display

Presentation of speech act analysis data used classification tables to make it more systematic and structured, then the finding data explaining in detail outside the table to be more specific.

3. Conclusion Drawing and Verification

The Directives tend to used by Robert McCall because he wanted the hearer do something based on his utterances. Robert McCall is the protagonist who always gives his enemies the opportunity to change to do good thing and sometimes gives advice to his friends. Robert McCall is a person who motivational so that's why there were so many directives found in this film.

McCall used commissives as the least speech act used to commit the speaker to some future course of action and express what the speaker intends.

Sometimes McCall threatens his enemy so that his enemy does the right thing, this threatening act is included in commissives act.

Expressives were also found in this research because Robert McCall wanted to represent his psychological expression such as saying good bye, be thankful, express admiration and etc.

There was no declaration found in this film because the main character in this film does not have a special institutional role, as George (1996:53) stated that declarations are those kinds of speech act that change the world via their utterance and the speaker has to have a special institutional role in specific context like a lawyer, priest, referee and etc. Not every scene in this film has a speech act therefore, the researcher just focuses on sentences or utterances that contain speech act.
