CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. The Background of the Study

Language varieties differ between groups separated by certain social variables (e.g., ethnicity, religion, status, gender, level of education, age, etc.) and how creation and adherence to these rules is used to categorize individuals in social or socioeconomic classes. As the usage of a language varies from place to place, language usage also varies among social classes, and it is these socialists that sociolinguistics studies. There are many language variation in society like pidgin, Creole, concept of standard usage, slang and taboo. and in this study the researcher choose slang for the research.

Slang is a secret language held by some community groups that are not owned by other groups. According to Trumble and Stevenson (2002), slang is described both as ‘the special vocabulary and usage of a particular period, profession, social group’ and as a ‘language that is regarded as very much below standard educated level. This definition of slang shows a tendency towards a sociological view of the phenomenon. Thus, slang is broadly construed as language that speakers deliberately use to break with the standart language and to change the level of discourse in the direction of informality.

Slang as language of a low and vulgar type and the special vocabulary or phraseology of a particular calling or profession (Epoge 2012). This sums up the paradox slang. People look down on it, but can hardly avoid using it, for everyone has some calling or profession. Slang is therefore informal and often ephemeral linguistic forms. We all use our language in different ways, depending on the circumstances. Most often, we speak differently in formal contexts and in informal contexts. Especially when speaking informally, we often take pleasure in resorting to slang informal but colourful words and expressions.

Slang expressions are usually introduced by the members of a particular social group; they may remain the property of that group and serve as a badge of group identity, or they may instead become much more widely known and used. The majority of slang forms have a comparatively short life but they can be very fashionable and picturesque.

Nowadays many people or teenagers use slang words in daily life and in their community or groups. The problems area lot of slang words that have meaning disrespectful and doesn't deserve to be spoken. Example like fuck, bitch, and asshole it should not be used in daily life because it's disrespectful. And slang words also have multiple meanings and it will make people confused by the meaning. Example like "ass out" ass out have multiple meaning like to say without money or broke you can say ass out, and to not attend a social gathering after already agreeing you can say ass out and etc depends on the context. And also many people or teenagers only know about the words of slang words but they do not know the types of slang words and they also do not know the words slang that they say will be enter into the types which one. That's why the researcher choose slang in this study because the problem in above. In this study the researcher will be research Suicide Squad movie to investigate the slang words.

Suicide Squad movie has many slang words and there are many types of slang can be find in this film. And each of slang has different meaning.

The researcher hopes from this study so that the readers know the meaning of slang and the types of slang from Suicide Squad movie. And the researcher also hope that the readers do not use slang in formal situations.

B. The Identification of the Problems

The problems of this research are identified as follows

1. many people or teenagers used slang words in formal situations.
2. many people or teenagers do not know the meaning of slang words.
3. many people or teenagers do not know the types of slang words.

C. Scope and Limitation

This study was focused on sociolinguistics, there are many language variation in society like dialect, register, jargon, style, and slang. And this research was limited on the slang in the script of Suicide Squad movie.

D. The Formulation of the Problems

The problems of this research are formulated as the following.

1. What types of slang words are used in the script of Suicide Squad movie?
2. What are the meaning of slang words used in the script of Suicide Squad movie?

3. Why is the most dominant type of slang word used in the script of Suicide Squad movie?

E. The Objectives of the Study

In this research, the objectives of the study are

1. to find out the types of slang words used in the script of Suicide Squad movie.
2. to find out the meanings of slang words used in the script of Suicide Squad movie.
3. to find out the most dominant type of slang word is used in the script of Suicide Squad movie.

F. The Significance of the Study

The findings of this study are expected to be useful theoretically and practically:

1. Theoretically,

this research can give more contribution for the progress in the science of sociolinguistic especially in teaching on slang words.

2. Practically,

- a. for the lectures

This research might be useful for lecture in giving additional input and reference about slang words in teaching sociolinguistic.

b. for other researcher

For the next analysis wish that other researcher will analyze on slang with a different aspects and an attractive write to attract other researcher to do than previous.

This research will be able to help movie watchers to understand the meaning of slang words in Suicide Squad movie.

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF LITERATURE

A. Theoretical Framework

2.1. Sociolinguistics

According to Wardaugh (2006) sociolinguistics investigates the relationships between language and society with the goal of a better understanding of the structure of language function. It means that in sociolinguistics people will learn about the way of social structures influences how people talk and how language varieties and pattern of use correlate with social attributes such as sex, and age.

There are some of the language variation which are created by people in specific community. In the sociolinguistics of society, Fasold in Lucas (2001) stated that the essence of sociolinguistics depends on two facts about language. They are language varies and language users. For the first, language varies uses the language to say that speakers have more than one way to say more or less the something. Language users use language to make statements about who they are, what their group loyalties are, and how they perceive their relationship to interlocutor and what kind of speech even they consider themselves to be involved.

2.2. Language Variety

Some facts about languages are that they are always changing over time, different between one another, and have a lot of varieties. The language variation exist because of the use of single language which is different within a single community, such as men do not speak like women, and older people do not speak like younger people. Mukhtar Abadi (2010) stated “Language, in other words, varies not only according to social characteristics of the speaker (such as his social class, ethnic group, age, and sex). The same speaker uses the different linguistics varieties in different situation and different purposes”.

Varieties of language appear from different language when people speak with each other. Moreover, every people have characteristic in their language. people indicate their language as their speech style.

Language variety can occur within communication depend on the aspect of speaker. as the statement from Fishman in Muhammad Ismail (2014) says that from the aspect of speaker, language variety is divided in five parts: Dialect, Register, Jargon, Style, and Slang.

2.3. The Slang Language

Dialect slang or slang language comes from Norway, “Slengeord”, which means the language of insult or as unofficial language varieties, and not raw seasonal nature. Used by a particular social group for internal communication, which is intended to non-members do not understand. The meaning of slang itself is the use of informal words and expressions that are not considered standard in the speaker's dialect or language.

After reading some materials and references, the researcher knows that there are some theories of slang that were proposed by some linguists. Here, some definitions of slang that are quoted by Jonathan Green (2000):

a. According to Hartman and Stork

“A variety of speech characterized by newly coined and rapidly changed vocabulary, used by the young or by social and professional groups for ‘in group’ communication and thus tending to prevent understanding by the rest of the speech community”.

Slang is an informal language used by young people or in a particular social group for internal communication so the other groups will not understand. They can create a new vocabulary and renewed the words.

b. According to Willis

“For the most part, slang is the result of linguistic inventiveness, especially of young and lively persons who want fresh, original pungent, or racy terms with which they can rename ideas, actions, and objects that they feel strongly about. In effect slang is the result of a combination of linguistic irreverence and a reaction against staid, stuffy, pompous, pretentious, or colorless diction”.

Conversational slang used by teenager and young children, because they are cheerful, creative and full of new ideas. So that the combination creates new words from the stiff and unattractive become fresh and easy to understand.

c. According to John Camden Hotten

“Slang represents that evanescent, vulgar language, ever changing with fashion and taste, spoken by persons in every grade of life, doesn't matter rich or poor, honest and dishonest. He also said that slang is indulged in from a desire to appear familiar with life, gaiety, town-humour and with transient nick names and street jokes of the day. Slang is the language of street humor, of fast, high and low life, and it is become as old as speech and the congregating together of people in cities”.

Slang is like a fashion or lifestyle, used by various societies rich or poor, honest or dishonest. Some people may say that slang is the vulgar language, but the fact is most society still using slang language in their life activities. They still used them because they do not want considered not fashionable.

Based on those definitions above the writer concludes that slang can be described as informal, nonstandard words or phrases which tend to originate in subcultures within a society. Slang often suggests that the person utilizing the words or phrases is familiar with the hearer's group or subgroup--it can be considered a distinguishing factor of in-group identity. Slang expressions often embody attitudes and values of group members. In order for an expression to become slang, it must be widely accepted and adopted by members of the subculture or group. Slang has no societal boundaries or limitations as it can exist in all cultures and classes of society as well as in all languages. Slang expressions are created in basically the same way as standard speech. In addition, it is noted that the words used as slang may be new coinages, existing words may acquire new meanings, narrow meanings of words may become generalized, words may be abbreviated, etc. However, in order for the expression to survive, it must be widely adopted by the group who uses it. Slang is a way in which languages change and are renewed.

2.4. History of Slang Language

After the writer searches some materials or references from the books, and browsing internets that relate to slang language, the writer has assumption that slang appears for the first time in Sixteenth century in Britain and at that time seem impossible that slang did not extend as widely through society then as it does today, but those early slang collections, more glossaries than dictionaries, concentrate purely on the villain's vocabulary.

The English of Criminal was developed in the 16th century. Therefore it was created a new kind of speech used by criminals and cheats, meaning it developed mostly in saloons and gambling houses. The English of Criminal was at first believed to be foreign, meaning scholars thought that it had either originated in Romania or had a relationship to French. The English of Criminal was slow developing. In fact, out of the four million people who spoke English, only about ten thousand spoke the English of Criminal. By the end of the 16th century this new style of speaking was considered to be a language "without reason or order".

The writer also finds that the history of slang is divided into five decades, which can be seen in those following era:

a. Sixteenth Century

Slang for the first time appeared in the society and became the strange language, also only particular group using it. For example, thieves, beggar, criminals, etc.

b. Seventeenth Century

In this century, slang rich of metaphors or figurative language and related to immoral action. Moreover, slang began to present in popular plays event and put the slang language on the stage for the first time, such as; in Richard Brome's comedy A Fovial Crew and in one of William Shakespeare's poem in the word hick.

c. Eighteenth Century

The rhetoricians had established for the first time, among the pupils and school masters a like, a key element in social conceptualization of slang. Furthermore, slang recognized as part of English vocabulary.

d. Nineteenth Century

Slang was growing, it could be seen that the intellectual produced the first slang dictionary (1899). The World War I and II also influenced in slang language, such as G.I, Pissed off, brass, etc.

e. Twentieth Century

Slang became a part of spoken language and not only used by thieves or criminals but also used by ordinary people, and slang was used in daily conversation because simpler and easier to speak it.

2.5. Types of Slang Language

According to Eric Partridge in his books Slang, “Today and Yesterday”, he states that “The different kinds of slang are numerous, and I propose to treat of only the twenty four most important: after all, there are limits.”

In this part, the writer only will explain some types of slang language. Some of slang types are:

a. Cockney Slang

Cockney slang is a form of English slang which originated in the East End of London, and has been popularized by film, music, and literature. Anthony Burgess used rhyming slang as a part of the fictitious dialect in his classic book A Clockwork Orange.

The slang of the former, except for a difference in accent, is exactly that of the speakers of Standard English, they employ one of the specific slangs such as the commercial or the military. But the slang of the latter is what is usually, and what will be called cockney slang.

There are two kinds of Cockney slang. First, used by educated middle class people and they are who came from origin regional. The second, used by the semi literate and quite illiterate people, recognized as Cockney London of Street, also English spoken by London people.

Below are just a few of the most common examples of Cockney slang:

- a. Eye in a Sling, means crushed or defeated.
- b. See the breeze and Taste the sun (with which compare feel the shrimps) or as an expression of summer enjoyment at escaping from London to an open common.

c. Old gay, general term of affection describing a wife.

d. Sky a Copper, means to make a disturbance.

e. Up the pole, means drunk.

f. Moniker, means a name, a title.

b. Public House Slang

As the part of types of slang, public house group words and phrases make up for the smallness of the recorded vocabulary by nature the subject. The definition of public house slang is considered as public house group words and phrases make up for the smallness of the recorded vocabulary by nature the subject. It is the main, genial, cheery, materialistic, but not gross nor cynical.

Then from Willis said about slang “For the most part, slang is the result of linguistic inventiveness, especially of young and lively persons who want fresh, original pungent, or racy terms with which they can rename ideas, actions, and objects that they feel strongly about. In effect slang is the result of a combination of linguistic irreverence and a reaction against staid, stuffy, pompous, pretentious, or colorless diction”. The writer makes conclusion that slang is the result of linguistic inventiveness, especially used by the young people, and lively persons who want refresh.

The examples of public house slang are:

a. Favorite Vice, means strong drink taken habitually.

b. Liquor, A publican’s euphemism for the water they use in adulterating beer.

In liquor, means drunk.

- c. Straight drinking, means drinking while standing in the bar.
- d. Buddy, means fellow or friend.
- e. Jumbo, means the elephant and castle, perhaps the most famous public house in London.

c. Workmen's Slang

Linking up with the public house is workmen's slang. This type is also very close to tradesman slang, yet all in all, it is better to consider them apart. The characteristic of the users of workmen's slang don't mention the real something but they call it with another name that already use and understood among them. Not only the workmen's but also the laborers using slang. In fact the town laborers and town operative are much fluent with their slang than the farmer laborers. Usually this slang used by people's activity in their working and also related with money.

Here are some examples of workmen's slang:

- a. Brass, means money. This is very general term seems to have originated in the cooper and ironworks.
- b. Hummered, means married.
- c. Want an apron, means to be out of work.
- d. Bucks means money, for example: "A hundred bucks to me..." the word bucks in this sentence means money.

d. Society Slang

Every social group uses some type of slang, and by association, those words and grammar become property of that group, something that defines them in a certain way. In the modern world, slang has become so much a defining trait of so many groups that it is impossible to ignore the impact it has had on western society. Unfortunately, much of the impact it has had is by underscoring social and class separations. Slang is part of communication in one form or the other. Even though slang usually has a negative assumption and isn't widely used by the upper class or high social status its part of language and its used in all types of situation of when people are not aware of it. They do not realize that the way they speak differs from the way that their predecessors spoke.

According to Partridge about society slang, he said: "In society and in all close corporations, groups, and sections of society, jargon tends to develop in proportion to the degree of its own exclusiveness. Society slang is concerned the spirit of universe, the world life, it also hovers, joyously or jauntily over objects and the practices of the slangster's own calling, with the difference jargon treats that solemnity and respect the avocation it serves, but slang seldom retains respect toward it, treats that avocation with the detached amusement that, viewed from a far, every human activity seems to invite."

Based on the statement above, the writer thinks that Society slang which is commonly used in daily speaking and connected to the society. Society slang is a term that the vocabularies generally show the world, and life. It hovers and joyously. In Society slang is also much jargon, the different between jargon and slang in Society slang are jargon treat with solemnity and respect the avocation it serves, but slang, even where as seldom it retains respect toward it, treat that avocation with the detached amusement that, viewed from afar, every human activity seems to invite.

With special vocabulary that easily change with the changing fashion.

Here are the examples of the society slang:

- a. Showy, means over-dressed.
- b. Vogue, means fashion or mode.
- c. Thou, means a thousand pounds sterling.
- d. Cold tub, means a cold morning bath.
- e. Not too nice, means bad, unpleasant.

e. Slang in Theatre

Slang in theatre is related with slang in art because theatre is one art term. The exact origin of slang is not known, although given the nature of language as a living, changing entity, it is probably as old as language itself. Theatre slang itself begins to develop in nineteenth centuries and expand its influence on ordinary and informal spoken English. Appears the new artists who use slang in his piece later and the story their made become the performance in a theatre; such as Andersson and Trudgill identify Aristophanes, the fourth-century-B.C. Greek playwright, as the first writer to use slang. The Roman writers Plautus, Horace, Juvenal, and Petronius also employed slang for stylistic purposes. Shakespeare also used slang in his plays.

In theatre slang there are some familiar terms, such as actor by professional is called pro. The man who is occasionally hired at trifling remuneration to come upon the stage as one of a crowd, or when a number of actors are wanted to give affect is name a supe. The band or orchestra is generally spoken of as the menagerie. A ben is a benefit and sal is for salary.

There are others example of slang in art, here are the following:

- 1) Acting lady, means an incapable actress. From the poor acting of the great majority of society women and girls that go on stage.
- 2) Paper house, means theatre that at a given performance has an audience consisting mainly of those who have come with “paper” complimentary ticket.

f. Slang in Church

Slang not only appears from people in the street or in their daily conversation, but also can be found from a holy place such as, church. It come up that slang has long since penetrated in the forum, and now we can meet it in the senate, even the pulpit itself is no longer free from instruction. On the contrary, and in justice to the clergy, it must be said that the principal disseminators of pure English throughout the country are the minister of our established Church.

Here are the examples of slang in church:

- 1) Holly Joe, means shallow, circular crowned that worn by clergymen, and the clergymen who use the word.

- 2) Candle shop, means A Broad Church term for either a Roman Catholic chapel.
- 3) Massites, means A Low Church invention for (and gravely accepted by) those members of the Anglican Church.
- 4) Liea at the Pool of Bethesda, means of theological candidates to be waiting for a benefice.

2.6. The Function of Slang

Slang is believed to give some function for its users. Some of people believe that slang users apply slang in some varieties for social identification purposes. Some people may used slang for humorous effect; to arrange social interaction in a group usesparticular words for particular purposes such as when they greet to other and farewells. Patridge provides a long list of the possible reasons for using slang, among them being the following: for fun, humor, playfulness; to be creative; to soct other; to reduce the excessive seriousness of a conversation; to be secretive; for group identity and solidarity.

2.7. The Characteristic and The Meaning of Slang Language Type

People used slang language because they are individuals who desire uniqueness, it stands to reason that slang has been in existence for as long as language has been in existence. Judi Sanders and Pamela Munro, who are linguistics professors at California Polytechnic University, believe that people use slang as a form of unity amongst a group of people and not creating barriers among groups. They have done several years of studies and research on why their student's use slang. They agreed that slang was very useful language because it reflects people's values and how they feel. Even so, the question of why slang develops within a language has been hotly debated. Most agree that the question is still unanswered, or perhaps it has many answers.

There is not just one's slang, but very many varieties or dialects of it. Different social groups in different times have developed their own slang. The importance of encryption and identity, of having a secret code or language, varies between these instances. For slang to maintain its power as a means of encryption, it must constantly be renewed. Many slang words are replaced, as speakers get bored of them or they are co-opted by those outside the group. For this reason, the existence of slang dictionaries reduces the perceived usefulness of certain slang words to those who use them.

2.8. Standard English

According to Steward, standardization is the codification and acceptance, within the community of the users, of a formal set of norms defining "correct usage". And Standard English is the variety of English that is held by many to be 'correct' in the sense that it shows none of the regional or other variations that are considered by some to be ungrammatical, or non-standard English. According to Loreto Todd and Ian Hancock, Standard English is the term given to the spectrum of English's taught in school, described in grammars and dictionaries, used by the media and written with relatively little variation throughout the English speaking world. Standard English is not absolutely clear-cut and discrete.

Although Standard English is generally the most formal version of the language, there exists a range of registers within Standard English, as is often seen when comparing a newspaper article with an academic paper, for example. A distinction also should be drawn between spoken and written standards. Spoken standards are traditionally looser than their written counterparts, and quicker to accept new grammatical forms and vocabulary. The various geographical varieties of S.E. more or less adhere in their written form to a generally-accepted set of rules, often those established by grammarians of the eighteenth century.

Received Pronunciation, often called RP is English spoken without a regional accent. is the way Standard English is spoken without regional variations. Standard English and RP are widely used in the media and by public figures, so it has prestige status and is regarded by many as the most desirable form of the language. It is often associated with the RP accent and in the United States with the General American accent but in fact can be spoken with any pronunciation.

The contrast with the situation today is not as great as it may seem if we think of Standard English today as one dialect among many. The English language, then and now, from a linguistic point of view consists of the sum of all its dialects, which today include Standard English.

2.9. Movie

Movie also called as film that is a type of visual communication which use moving pictures and sound to tell stories or inform people to learn. Every people watch movies as a type of entertainment, a way to have fun. A film is created by photographing actual scenes with a motion picture camera; by photographing drawings or miniature models using traditional animation technique; by means of CGI and computer animation; or by a combination of some or all of these techniques and other visual effects. Film is considered to be an important art form, a source of popular entertainment, and a powerful medium for educating or indoctrinating-citizens. The visual basis of film gives it a universal power of communication.

2.10. The Synopsis of the Movie

“Suicide Squad” is a 2016 American superhero film based on the DC Comics anti hero team of the same name. It is the third installment in the DC Extended Universe. The film is written and directed by David Ayer and stars an ensemble cast featuring Will Smith, Jared Leto, Margot Robbie, Joel Kinnaman, Viola Davis, Jai Courtney, Jay Hernandez, Adewale Akinnuoye-Agbaje, Ike Barinholtz, Scott Eastwood and Cara Delevingne. In Suicide Squad, a secret government agency led by Amanda Waller recruits imprisoned super villains to execute dangerous black ops missions and save the world from a powerful threat, in exchange for leaner sentences. By February 2009, a Suicide Squad film was in development at Warner Bros. Pictures. Ayer signed on to write and direct in September 2014, and by October, the casting process had begun. Principal photography began on April 13, 2015, in Toronto, Ontario, with additional filming in Chicago, Illinois, and ended in August that year.

This movie told about In the aftermath of Superman's death, intelligence officer Amanda Waller assembles Task Force X, a team of dangerous criminals imprisoned at Belle Reve Prison consisting of elite hitman Deadshot, former psychiatrist Harley Quinn, pyrokinetic ex-gangster El Diablo, opportunistic thief Captain Boomerang, genetic mutation Killer Croc, and specialized assassin Slipknot. They are placed under command of Colonel Rick Flag to be used as disposable assets in high-risk missions for the United States government. Each member has a nano bomb implanted in their neck, designed to detonate should any member rebel or try to escape.

One of Waller's intended recruits is Flag's girlfriend Dr. June Moone, an archaeologist possessed by a witch-goddess known as the "Enchantress".
